Administrative history / Biographical sketch

Note

The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (IBEW) was founded on 21 November 1891 in St. Louis, Missouri, making it the oldest electrical union in the world. The first Canadian local was founded in 1899 in Ottawa, Ontario. There are approximately 950 locals in North America representing more than 780,000 members. In Canada, there are some 90 locals representing more than 60,000 members.

Local 1928 established its charter on 1 January 1955. In 1973 IBEW amalgamated System Council U29 into Local 1928 when Nova Scotia Light & Power, Eastern Light & Power and the Nova Scotia Power Commission amalgamated to become the Nova Scotia Power Corporation. The majority of Local 1928's 1700 members are employees of Nova Scotia Power; the local also represents members at Emera Utility Services, Black and McDonald, Town of Antigonish Public Works and Electric Utility, the Municipality and Town of Shelburne, Sears Canada and the Town of Lunenburg Electric Utility. A 2016 merge with Local 1432 in Prince Edward Island added employees of Maritime Electric, the City of Summerside and the University of PEI.

IBEW locals establish their own bylaws, general rules and policies in concert with the IBEW constitution. Locals have autonomy in the election of their full-time officers, table officers and executive boards (e-boards) and in negotiating collective agreements with their members' employers. Local 1928 holds elections every four years to determine its business manager and e-board, which consists of four officers—including a president, treasurer and recording secretary—and nine unit chairs, who represent geographical divisions.

The business manager is responsible for all of the business of the local, while the president and other officers are responsible for local union governance as outlined in the IBEW Constitution. Each local unit elects a suite of officers that mirrors the executive board and holds monthly meetings, which are attended quarterly by the business manager or his/her representative.

The business manager hires the local's assistant business manager and office staff and also appoints shop stewards for indefinite terms. Shop stewards receive training both from the local and from the International IBEW office.

Custodial history

The first transfer of records from IBEW Local 1928 to Dalhousie University Archives occurred in 1988, followed by accessions in 1989, 1991, 1993, 2004, 2011 and 2016. Further accessions are anticipated.

Scope and content

Fonds includes financial, legal, administrative and human resources materials dating from the local's founding in 1955, providing insight into the development of the organization's policies and procedures, and also illustrating the broader labour movement and role of unions in shaping the political and social landscape in Nova Scotia. The records provide evidence of the union's administrative and operational functions and activities, including contract negotiation, grievance administration, dues remittance, pension fund administration, membership and labour advocacy, workers' training and education and strike coordination. The records were created by the local's office staff, business managers, executive board, elected officials, Board of Trustees, membership and business associates. Earlier records (pre-1955) became part of the IBEW Local 1928 archive when other IBEW Locals were amalgamated with 1928.

Subseries consists of the administrative and operational records of associated local unions kept by IBEW Local 1928. The majority of these records became a part of the IBEW Local 1928's records as a result of the amalgamation of locals. The IBEW Systems Council U-29, made up of a group of Nova Scotian IBEW locals (1818, New Glasgow; 1089, Sydney; 1866, Malay Falls; 1867, Milton; 1876, St. Margaret's; and 2146, Amherst) and Line Construction, represented the employees of the Nova Scotia Power Commission (NSPC) until 1972, when NSPC merged with the Nova Scotia Light and Power Company (represented by IBEW Local 1928) to become the Nova Scotia Power Corporation. Between 1973 and 1975, those locals that were previously part of U-29, transferred into Local 1928. Other IBEW Local records include those from 1165 (Windsor, Nova Scotia) and 1432 (Prince Edward Island).

Subseries also contains agreements, by-laws, and constitutions of other (non-IBEW) labour unions that IBEW Local 1928 worked with.
