Administrative history / Biographical sketch

Note

The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Local 625 received its charter in 1908. From 1908 to 1974, Local 625 represented electrical workers primarily engaged in construction work within Halifax. In 1974 IBEW Local 1818, which represented electrical workers in mainland Nova Scotia outside the Halifax area, amalgamated with Local 625, which henceforth represented electrical workers across mainland Nova Scotia. From 1974, Local 625 created a unit structure to organize its expanded union. For administrative purposes, Local 625 was segregated into five geographical units: Unit 1 (Halifax Regional Municipality); Unit 2 (Five Eastern Counties); Unit 3 (Annapolis Valley); Unit 4 (South Shore); and Unit 5 (Western Counties).

Financial instability in the early 1970s led to the 1818/625 merger. After the merger, Local 625 re-gained its financial footing by organizing more workplaces into the union, including the Nova Scotia Armature Works' electrical workers in 1974. The late 1970s and early 1980s saw frequent and lengthy labour disputes between Local 625 and the Construction Association Management Labour Bureau, an employers' association that represented several construction contractors in negotiations with Local 625 and other construction unions. These disputes were typified by strikes and walk-outs at the Quinpool Centre and the Almon Street postal centre construction sites in 1978, and by a lengthy strike in 1983 that kept Local 625 workers off of all construction job sites for most of that year. The 1983 strike, which resulted in a partial victory for Local 625, was the last major province-wide labour dispute documented in this fonds. However, disputes and walk-outs of a smaller nature continued throughout the 1980s and 1990s.

In 1994 Local 625 faced a new economic challenge when Phillips Cables, a manufacturing company that employed union members, closed its Nova Scotia division. This incident corresponded to a pattern of unemployment faced by Local 625 workers; one of the Local's longstanding issues has been finding enough work for its members.

From the early 1990s, Local 625 assumed a larger role in the community through increased charitable activities. The union became a donor to the Foster Parents' Plan of Canada and to the IWK Children's Hospital, and Local 625 business manager Fern Tardif served on the hospital's Board of Directors for one term. Furthermore, the union has maintained a commitment to several construction industry-related associations and initiatives in order to increase its profile and to advocate for workers' rights.

The administration of Local 625 is overseen by the Executive Board, which is comprised of the Local's president, vice-president, treasurer, recording secretary, member from the floor, and the chairperson from each of the union's five geographical units. Each of these positions is elected on an annual basis. The day-to-day business of the union is directed by the business manager/financial secretary, who is elected annually and is supported by an assistant business manager and office staff.

Custodial history

The records of this fonds were received by the Dalhousie University Archives and Special Collections in four accruals from Local 625. The first shipment was received in February, 1991, the second shipment was received in November, 1994, the third shipment was received in June, 1997, and the fourth shipment was received in April, 1998.

Scope and content

This fonds consists of records that document the administrative and operational activities of IBEW Local 625. As the union which represents inside electrical workers across mainland Nova Scotia, Local 625 engages in a variety of activities which are represented in this fonds; these include employer negotiation, grievance administration, dues remittance, pension fund administration, labour advocacy, workers' training and education, strike coordination, recreational events, and membership advocacy. The records in this fonds were created by the union's office staff, business managers, executive board, elected officials, Board of Trustees, membership, and business associates.

Series: Administration records of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 625 (Halifax).

Title: Administration records of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 625 (Halifax).

Date: 1963-1998 (date of creation)

Scope and content:

This series documents the administrative functions of the Local, including the records of the Executive Board, membership, and staff. Much of the day-to-day work of the business manager is represented in this series, in particular dealings with the Local's membership, recreational activities, newsletters, and dues. The Local by-laws and internal disciplinary processes resulting from infractions of said by-laws or the union's constitution are also represented.

Series: Affiliations

Title: Affiliations

Date: 1974-1996 (date of creation)

Scope and content:

This series represents affiliations that Local 625 had with various electrical, construction, or labour associations and organizations. The extent of the affiliation varies; Local 625 was heavily involved with associations such as the Mainland Nova Scotia Building & Construction Trades Council, while other affiliations consisted only of the business manager's participation, such as the Voluntary Planning Forum. Any pertinent information pertaining to regional or national labour conventions or trade shows is also included in this series.

Series: Extra-Local Relations and Correspondence

Title: Extra-Local Relations and Correspondence

Date: 1971-1998 (date of creation)

Scope and content:

This series documents relations between Local 625 and several other IBEW locals (including Local 1818 prior to the amalgamation), the national and international IBEW offices, other unions, business associates, and government agencies. As part of its mandate, Local 625 maintained relations with IBEW locals across North America in order to accommodate transfers of Local 625 members to other jurisdictions and vice-versa. Correspondence between Local 625 and the national and international offices regarding procedural issues, reports, and policy are also included. Any correspondence of a general nature with legal counsel or regarding legal fees but which is not necessarily relevant to a specific unit or employer is also included in this series. Applications for certification, letters of agreement between the Local and various employers, and other important documents related to government jurisdiction of labour issues are also included in this series.

Series: Finances of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 625 (Halifax)

Title: Finances of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 625 (Halifax)

Date: 1970-1996 (date of creation)

Scope and content:

This series represents the extent of the finances, accounts, benefits, and investments of the Local. The Board of Trustees, composed of IBEW members, employer representatives, and financial consultants and which oversaw the Local's pension and benefit funds, is represented in this series by minutes of meetings, notices, and correspondence. Documents related to hardship loans, which were made available to unemployed members of the Local in order to help alleviate the expense of dues, are included in this series, although all other dues-related documents are located in the Administration series. Documents such as correspondence and promotional material related to the Local's charitable activities, including associations with the IWK Children's Hospital and the Foster Parents' Plan of Canada, are also contained within this series.

Physical description: 1.3 m of textual records

Restrictions on access:

The Charitable Activities sub-series contains a number of promotional photographs related to IWK donations and photographs of the children sponsored by the Local through the Foster Parents' Plan of Canada.

Series: Units

Title: Units

Date: 1970-1998 (date of creation)

Scope and content:

This series, the largest in the fonds, documents the main purpose of the Local: representation of union members at their places of employment. This aspect of the Local's work is multi-faceted and is represented by documents related to contract negotiations, strikes, walk-outs, grievances, complaints, correspondence, certification, cease and desist orders, disciplinary hearings, arbitration, and pay disputes. Files are organized by bargaining or geographical unit. The Local's larger bargaining units are represented in separate sub-series, such as Surette Battery. Small contractor companies which were affiliated with the Construction Association Management Labour Bureau (CAMLB) are arranged under the CAMLB sub-series, as is correspondence with the Bureau itself, while all other smaller bargaining units without such an affiliation are arranged under the Other Units sub-series. The sub-series devoted to geographical units contain documents related to the administration of the associated region and not to any particular jobsite in said region.

Physical description: 3.4 m of textual records

Restrictions on access:

All files related to grievances, warnings, dismissals or those which have material of a personal nature have restricted access.
