Administrative history / Biographical sketch

Note

The Oland family was involved in the brewing industry for more than one hundred years. John James Dunn Oland and Susannah Woodhouse Culverwell immigrated from England to Nova Scotia with their nine children in 1865. By 1867, they began brewing beer in Dartmouth, Nova Scotia. The family tradition of brewing continued until the Oland family sold Oland and Son, Limited and A. Keith and Son Limited in 1971.

Members of the Oland family were great contributors to their Nova Scotian cultural communities. They strongly supported a variety of activities and organizations, including sports, art, education, agriculture, and the Army and Navy. Most of all, they were well known for their philanthropic involvement with these charities and organizations.

A comprehensive diagram of the Oland family tree can be found in the book What's Brewing: Oland, 1867-1971, A History by G. Brenton Haliburton. Members of the family continue to reside in Atlantic Canada.

Custodial history

Materials remained in the custody of the Oland family until they were donated to Dalhousie University Archives, along with business papers from Oland and Son and its affiliated companies. Donations were made in sixteen accessions from 1978 to 2012 by Bruce Oland, Victor deBedia Oland, James Oland, and Richard Oland. The family records were separated from the business records of Oland and Son and its affiliated companies (MS-4-135).

Scope and content

Fonds consists of various personal records, including correspondence, scrapbooks, photographs, slides, negatives, an artifact, and legal and financial records. Some business records from Oland and Son Limited and its affiliated companies are also included.

Restrictions on access

The majority of the Oland family records are open to the public. However, select records are closed. See individual series descriptions for lists of restricted files.
