Dear Mr. Raddall,

David Manuel has very recently left to take a position in our New York office and I have taken his place here.

I thought it important to write and, as it were, introduce myself at once, since we shall no doubt be in close contact hereafter. I am sure that you are aware how proud and pleased we are here that you are a Doubleday author. Our association has been a happy one in the past and I hope that it will be just as happy in the future.

Just to make sure that I have got my bearings, I wonder if you would drop me a line at some point to tell me how your writing is going.

I hope that you will let me know if you plan to be in my part of the world since I am looking forward to meeting you. In any case, please don't hesitate to contact me if any problems of any publishing sort crop up.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Yours sincerely,

Doug Gibson

Mr. Douglas M. Gibson, Editor,
Doubleday Canada Ltd.,
Toronto, Canada.

Dear Mr. Gibson:

Thank you for your enquiry.

On April 2, 1963, I signed my last contracts with Doubleday Canada, and Doubleday, New York. They covered three books that I had in mind, as follows:-

1. Hangman's Beach, a historical novel.
2. Footsteps On Old Floors, a collection of true tales.
3. A history and description of Sable Island.

Up to this time I had enjoyed my relations with Doubleday and was satisfied with their handling of my books.

However when Hangman's Beach was published I found that the trade wind on Park Avenue had changed for the worse, as far as my books were concerned. (My friend at New York, Tom Costain, had died in the meantime.) The New York promotion of Hangman's Beach was small and perfunctory, and when I protested to Ken McCormick his reply amounted to a polite shrug.

I wrote and delivered Footsteps On Old Floors, which got the same treatment. In this case, of course, I knew that short stories of this sort are not as popular as novels.

That left the third item in the 1963 contracts. I knew that a book of this kind could have no wide appeal, but George Nelson agreed to include it because as a Canadian author I felt it should be written, even though it could bring no profit to Doubleday or to me. However, while I was still gathering material for it, I met a naval officer of a literary bent who had been working on the same thing, and I was happy to show him what I had, and to give him permission to use it in his own book. Thus the 1963 contracts are now closed.

On Oct. 7, 1968, David Nelson wrote to inform me that New York had let Halifax, Warden Of The North go out of print in 1967, and that the plates had been destroyed, without notifying me or your people in Toronto. I got the message in all respects.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Raddall,

Thank you for your letter of July 26th.

As you know we at the Canadian office have always been particularly proud of our association with you. And as you also know, we have worked especially hard in promoting and selling your books to the extent that book-sellers now regard you as a major Doubleday author, to our mutual benefit. I very much hope that this mutually beneficial association will continue.

I gather from your letter that you have now definitely dropped the Sable Island project mentioned in our contract. I wonder if you have yet come up with an idea for a replacement. If you have, we shall be pleased to hear about its progress; if you have not, we can perhaps suggest a few ideas which might interest you.

I have no doubt that the weather is more pleasant in Liverpool than it is in clammy Toronto as I write. I envy you the Nova Scotian breezes.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Yours sincerely,

Douglas Gibson

Dear Mr. Raddall,

I have just received a copy of your letter of August 28 to Ken McCormick. From this letter and from your decision not to answer my letter of August 6th, I must regretfully conclude that you wish to sever all connections with Doubleday Canada.

Before this can be finally accomplished, the question of the $1,250 paid to you in 1963 as an advance on the book on Sable Island will have to be settled.

Rather than ask you to repay the lump sum immediately, we propose to follow the following procedure. During the period covered by the next two royalty statements (just over one year) we intend to apply all royalties from the continuing sales of your books against the outstanding sum of $1,250. At the end of this period we shall ask you to repay the balance. After the repayment has been made, any further royalty payments will resume.

Please let us know if this procedure meets with your approval or if you have any alternative suggestions.

Yours sincerely,

Douglas Gibson

Dear Mr. Raddall,

Thank you very much for your cheque for $1250.00 which I received this morning. The receipt of this cheque means that your contract with Doubleday is now at an end. It goes without saying, however, that our royalty payments to you will continue as long as your books remain in print and continue to sell.

I am sorry that my own dealings with you have all concerned your severing your links with Doubleday. I join with everyone here in wishing you every success in the future.

Yours sincerely,

Douglas Gibson

Original letter enclosed with my income tax papers for 1969, on March 3, 1970, to support my statement regarding net royalties received from Doubleday Canada Ltd.

Nov.1, 1969

Mr. Douglas M. Gibson,
Doubleday Canada Ltd.,
Toronto, Canada.

Dear Mr. Gibson:

Thank you for your courteous letter of October 24th.

I had no complaint against your people in Toronto, who looked after my interests in Canada very well.

My quarrel was with New York, where the neglect of my interests, beginning with the poor promotion of HANGMAN'S BEACH, had become not only irritating but insulting. The destruction of the plates of HALIFAX, WARDEN OF THE NORTH, without consulting me or your Canadian office, and disregarding
the fact that there was, and is, a continuing market
for the book in Canada, was really the last straw.
Even so, I waited nearly a year before making the final breach; and as you will readily understand, in view of any future publishing arrangements, the break with Doubleday had to be complete.

Sincerely,

DOUBLEDAY CANADA LIMITED

Dear Mr. Raddall,

We are just about to make up our publicity poster for THE BROKEN SNARE, and wonder if you would like to have a quote included on it.

Obviously we can't expect you to better Fred Rodsworth's: "The best book I have read in quite a few years"--but we should be very pleased to learn what you think of the book.

Best wishes,

A handwritten signature in blue ink that reads "Doug Gibson". The signature is written in a cursive, slightly slanted style.

Dear Mr. Gibson:

I should have written before, because I enjoyed Symons' book. If you like, you may quote any part or all of the following:-

"As a young man I took to the forest of the east, just as Symons did in the west. So I know what he is talking about, and it is a true and manful story of the struggle we are all losing, wherever we live."
