To

Mr James Dunwoody

Mr. A. J. J. J.

Dublin

Sir

I have often had the pleasure of hearing of your welfare, since you was last in London, which, care of yours gave me always pleasure and not the least so, by hearing a few days ago, that you was married to a very agreeable woman, and dare say have done her best health, your where ever, the still unknown to me, no matter, and most sincerely wish you both long life and happiness, and, ^{what} it is with Heaven grant you, may your blessing

Old acquaintances must, by the favour of your good copy, a little instructor, in the line, your presence at present of returning to our gentlemanly Subjects, he is at present by the my Dublin duty, it would not be doing him justice, were I not to say that he is tractable, and I leave you and him to find what suits his generous best, for his Amusement, and improvement in his Military line, with my best respects of congratulations to Mrs. Dunwid and self, am always
