Dear Tom:

I acknowledge your letter of November 17th.

Sarah Crocker was buried in Camp Hill Cemetery. One of the few persons still alive who were present at her interment was John F. Shaw, a Barrister in the Roy Building, Halifax. The Salvation Army paid the funeral expenses, but I do not know if they put up a tombstone. The funeral took place on a day in May, 1936. I remember after the funeral, in company with Mr. Doyle, who was acting as Solicitor for the Salvation Army, Major Mundy and John Shaw, her strong box was opened I think in the Royal Bank's main office in Halifax. Major Mundy was very relieved to find that the old lady had quite a few stocks and bonds in the box, because at that time his worry was who was going to pay for the funeral.

If I can tell you any more to be of help,
please do not hesitate to drop me a line.

Yours faithfully,

Roy
