

Chas. Spalding

9 Sept. 1783

Mr James Dinwiddie Teacher of mathematics in

Dublin

Dr Sir

I intended to have wrote you long ago, but the Melancholy death of my son has rendered me incapable, he was highly esteem'd by his numerous acquaintances both of nobility & Gentry both in England & Scotland who knew him and the loss of him much regretted by all of them. It may be thought wite in me to say any thing to his praise but this only beg leave to say that he was possid of the most amiable Qualifications, a true friend, a most excellent genius, and a real love to the good of mankind which prompted him to undertake the Diving Bell and many things besides, perhaps few ever did more lamented I earnestly beg your goodness will let me know all you can concerning my dear son's death, and in particular the Captain of the ship name who was hired to save him from -brary to his orders kept him under water an hour and a quarter, and although he had received the two Barrels his fire says he sent down to him, which he knows not if he ever received them, yet still he kept him a quarter of an hour longer than all that air could have serv'd him, which would have kill'd all Mankind, the want of air for for fifteen minutes I am certainly assur'd. And this is such a crime as no mortal ought to pardon, murdering two innocent men whether by Design or neglect god only knows, but whatever way it was the Crime is most heinous both in the sight of God and man. And when my son and servant were brought up they were most cruelly and barbarously treat'd laid on the head of a barrel each of them in a cold morning, whereas being both very warm if they had let blood of their heads them warm Dr Cullen and all the Physicians in Edinr declare they have recovered been alive and well. I am not able to write any more and barbarous murder committed by Neglect or Design, one of which it may was so skill'd in Diving that if the Shipmaster & his men had done their more order'd my dear ly beloved son had been alive and in safety. If my son in Law had been with my son as he was with him at portsmouth no evil had a lady from Ireland last week in forming my daughter and husband that such begone in Ireland for my sons widow and seven infants all who are in any thing yet, if so advise me, first in course, and if not let me know if proper to open a Subscription in Ireland, indeed its the opinion of all your it's proper as its reported the Gentry & Nobility in Ireland are very generous on occasions. If the worthy Mr Black Dr Black in Edinr his brother and you thinks fit to do any thing in this manner for the excellent woman the excellent distressed widow, the leaves it to your selves, relying on your goodness The Diving Bell cost first & last above two thousand pounds, the value recovered out of the Royal George above four thousand pounds, the value four hundred pounds ster. and he had not above one hundred pounds ster. to the charges he paid. I hope your goodness which I know long ago, per giving you and the worthy Mr Black, I am in sincerity, Dr Sir your most obedient
 Chas: Spalding

Ed: 9th Sept. 1783 P: Sir I'm case your goodness cause you go on in the Subscription I hereby to pay you all Charges shall be incurred or you brought into, Chas: Spalding whatt adds to my sorrow ^{is} my being seduced by Robertson of Malloch to sell my own Estate which tho' it was but one hundred and odd pounds Sterling a yearly would have been a great help to my Daughter & Grandchildren, and of the price of this Estate was several others sold hands to this old gentleman all cheated for he gave himself for a rich man and he proved bankrupt, and I had no sell at all