George Sakellaridis (above) holder of a UNESCO fellowship visited Dal recently on his way to central Canada where he is to study the federal system of government. While here is made preliminary studies on this subject.

Greek Government Official, George Sakellaridis, Visits Law School

The Dalhousie Law School was honoured for the last few weeks by a visit of George Sakellaridis, Official of the Greek State Ministry of International Affairs, and member of the Bar of Athens. Mr. Sakellaridis is a graduate in Law and Political Economic Science and is the holder of UNESCO fellowship and is visiting Canada to make a study of the Federal system of Government, in order to write a treatise comparing the Greek set-up with that of a Federal Country.

Mr. Sakellaridis arrived in Canada on Christmas Day on the Liner Empress of Canada. He spent séveral weeks in Halifax which he devoted to a preliminary study of the Canadian system at the Dalhousie Law School, with the assist-Professer Batt, and C. F. Fraser, Director of the Institute of Public Affairs. He was also entertained in the home of Halifax and Bedford residents.

Asked what he thought of the Canadian Governmental system he replied: The Canadian system is very different from that of Greece In Greece we have only one Government because we do not have those geographic and economic considerations which necessitate the division into provinces of this country. The theoretical study of your system is very interesting, especially from the point of view of structure of the administration services and from the point of view of international law, constitutional law, and what is included in the term "General theory of the State". I hope that I shall make many interesting studies about these questions. I admire the intellectual thinking in this country. In my opinion the level of intellectual thought is very high in Canada."

He explained that in Greece the law is codified. The laws of Contract, Property, Marriage and Divorce, Inheritance, and Commercial Law are all codified, as well as of McGill and the University of Criminal Law. He said, "The Montreal. source of Greek constitutional law that is different from the English

I believe that the perfect system would be by ADMINI STRATIVE JUDGES. These tribunals would be so constituted that the administration would not be a menace to the judges and that the Administration and Judiciary should be separated, to guarantee dependable and fair justice."

He emphasized the importance of the UNESCO fellowship, because, he said, "The exchange of persons from country to country is the best way for the youth of one country to get to know those of another, sity students-will attend the sem- to lead to comprehension of the and to communicate culture and, therefore, become friends."

Mr. Sakellaridis left Halifax Tuesday afternoon for Montreal where he will be met by Professor Lortie of the University of Montreal, who will introduce him to the members of the Faculties of Law

HOMECOMING WEEK FINANCIAL SUCCESS

College Students

OTTAWA-This year the Federal Civil Service will go into the market for 450 college graduates, the Civil Service Commission announced today.

About 175 positions will go to civil engineers and the remainder to graduates in a variety of fields. They hold out the prospect of an excellent career.

At the junior levels the starting salaries will run from around $200 to $225 a month. They may be considerably higher if the positions call for a number of years' experience after graduation.

Most of the appointments will go to students with a science background, especially those with training in engineering, architecture, chemistry, agricultural science, mathematics and physics.

About 15 or 20 Junior Administrative Assistants and a few Foreign Service Officers will also be taken on although the exact number will depend on the quality of the applicants. A fair number of economists and statisticians are also required.

The main need, as suggested, is for civil engineers for the Bureau of Surveys and Mapping, a branch of the Department of Mines and Resources, and for employment on various public works and construction programs.

A booklet 'Careers for College Graduates' will also be distributed and this will contain detailed inthe Glee Club for the forthcoming formation on many fields of work, operetta. We have three (3) and the closing dates for applications, manager and assistant manager re-

> Incidentally, the closing dates within the period December. 1949, to February, 1950.

Civil Service to Homecoming Committee Gives Provide Jobs for Report on Council Venture

The report of the Homecoming Committee was given Monday by Chairman Bernal Sawyer. A total of 250 alumni were registered. $681.52 was budgeted and $524.47 was spent, with receipts totalling $601.90, leaving a credit balance

Mr. Sawyer thanked Art Moreira who originated the idea and complimented the Committee and Campus Organizations on their cooperation in the undertaking.

That will be the theme of this year's Millionnaires Ball to be held February 10 at the Gym. The feature of the dance will be the crowning of the Campus Queen, better known as the Sweater Queen.

All the societies and faculties on the campus are asked to choose their own individual queens to compete in the Commerce Society contest on the 10th. At present the boys from the Commerce Classes are eying the female side of the Campus and they have their own opinions (censored of course) of just who should win the crown. Wanted: A Belief in Individualism

(Reprinted from "The Manitoban")

"No work is ever done collectively, by a majority decision." -Ayn Rand

Once again the editors of the MANITOBAN have been called upon to defend the paper's unorthodox policy of having no policy. This time the Canadian University Press Conference in Montreal was the occasion of a debate which, although in all good spirits, brought out in its long and serious passages basic differences in opinion as to the function of a student newspaper. It may not be too untimely to draw from this discussion conclusions which students may well seriously consider.

Sparking a two-hour open forum, Clyde Kennedy of the McGILL DAILY contended that our practice of allowing every interested student to have his material published unaltered and unadorned led to a wishy-washy editorial page in which no opinion could be pointed to as that of the abstract entity known as "the paper." Jack Gray of the Toronto VARSITY joined in by claiming that editorials should be written under consultation and that the final product should be a boiled down version of the consensus of opinion. He felt that by such a system, the prestige and tradition of the VARSITY'S sixty years' publishing could be thrown behind whatever is in the lead

Red Lampert of the Dalhousie GAZETTE resolved the question whether the paper should lead or follow student opinion, and seemed to feel that under a wide-open policy the leadership was lost in the effort to mirror the campus. Ray Du Plessis of Ottawa's FULCRUM stated that there was a right and wrong to every question and that the editors were in a position to point out the right side. The majority of the delegates joined in the friendly massacre, but the salient points are outlined above. Although the opinions were well considered and extremely interesting, we remain unmoved, save for a slinking fear that all campi are not as democratic as ours.

We do not believe that there exists or should exist an entity designed as the MANITOBAN which will take a position on any current topic and defend it to the death. We do not believe in organizing campus opinion along certain lines, for we do not believe that the editors have the right or the duty, much less the ability to perform this function. We believe that the editors are individuals, who should wield no more thought-molding power than is the right of every student on campus. To deny anyone that right by either assertion or assumption would be a flagrant violation of our responsibility.

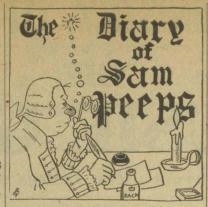

We do not believe in collective thought, because there can exist collective mind. Any opinion possessed of integrity and convic tion can be best expressed only by one particular person and only in his particular way. Statements which are the result of a compromise or coalition can be neither respected nor understood. We believe that a student newspaper is not the voice of one man or the collective voice of a group, but the sum of as many individual voices as wish to be heard. The sum is vastly different from the common denominator determined by collaboration, for the sum allows the existence of the parts while cooperation destroys the parts to establish a consensus.

We do not believe in absolute right or wrong, for as a confessed relativist, we contend that there exists no final statement on political or social problems. We believe that the basic questions of human life remain unsolved and that only by free and open discussion will Publicity and Propaganda Society we make progress towards understanding and appreciation. Let it of the College on the Hill and did be realized that this attitude does not prevent the holding of convictions, but despite being willing to defend them rather strenuously. we cannot conceive of forcing our convictions upon someone else. We demand for others the same psychological and moral freedom that has been granted us.

We believe that the MANITOBAN provides leadership more adequately than do many other papers because its pages are open to the persuasive powers of any student. We continue to hope that those who are incompetent will bow to public scorn and leave those who say important things to provide the stimulation and leadership.

We believe that this position provides the best assurance that the social and political rights of the students will be safeguarded, for the beliefs upon which it is based are those which help perpetuate democratic powers. It is based upon a faith in the ability of students to read, think and decide for themselves. Other systems are limited by natural boundaries, for the calibre of writing can never exceed the abilities of the journalistic clique. If the MANITOBAN writers fail remark that I assumed that she to satisfy, it is not their fault alone, but that of a society which is did not know of these first hand, failing to provide individual initiative and conviction,

Let us not be ridiculed as idealistic, for progress is based upon party. idealism and sometimes dreaming can lead to creation. Those who criticize reveal only too little faith in basic democratic processes.

Wednesday, January 11, 1950. Breakfasted on some toast soaked in sack, a delightful food for morning meals and resolved to continue this practice. I then proceeded to Studlee where all is talk of the Students' Doomsday Book, Faroff. It doth seem that the Parliament has taken steps to speed up the publication of the volume, as some of the students, especially the Lawyers, have become noisesome of late in their demand for the book, so vain are some to see their own portraits.

Shoutland, who was the Editor of the Doomsdaybook, is willing to explain his point of view to anybody who will listen, and he does has a lot of convincing arguments. While at the Wood Building did see him expounding to a student who agreed with everything he had to say. I believe that it was the noted parliamentarian, Gorgon Cinders.

Did hear that All-fired Hairless who is to present a case before the bench of the court. He is to be opposed by his bosom friend Snarl Gooseburg. I did hear that both believe that the justices are prejudiced against them and each expects to lose his case.

Thursday, January 12, 1950. Passing by the college on the hill I did meet Miss Doggo, who is on the staff of the Spectator, Morning Edition. I did remark that she was wearing a very heavy coat and did ask her why she did so, for she had just come from the offices of the Spectator and this is often a very warm place indeed. She did reply that of late when certain persons, who were not speaking to each other came into the office of the Spectator to contribute their work the air became very chill indeed and she was afeared of contacting a rhume.

Did go to the Gentlemen's Assembly Room where I did slide on the floor and nearly take a tumble, for the floor was coated with some slippery substance. Did discover that this was due to Airwick Bicker, who did coat the floor heavily with wax for the Asses and Seance Society weekly Ball.

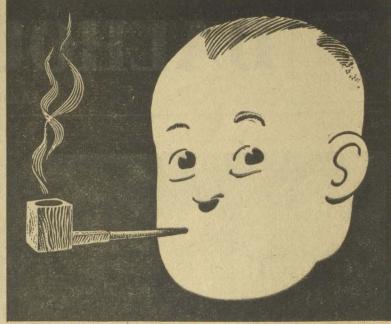

January, Friday 13, 1950. Up today on the wrong side of the bed. Did go downstairs to eat and did have the misfortune to spill the salt as I ate. Feeling adventuresome I did decide to tempt fate and go out and walk about the streets. I was quickly convinced of the truth of the old superstitions for the first one I should meet was Lightdaughter. I pretended not to notice him but did not deceive him. He told me that he was now devoting himself to his studies and would not waste his time in association with scurvy companions and then wished me good day.

Did meet Airwick Bicker, of the suggest to him that as a spectacle to attract persons he should announce that at a certain date he will climb to the top of the new building being built at Studlee and thence jump down to the ground without a net below. He did not seem to approve of this scheme and did leave me in a huff.

Next I saw Shoutland approaching and did quickly dash into a side street. Here I did meet Weeda McKickin. We did discuss the situation in her home, Cape Breton, and talk of the parties held over the festive season. I did for none would invite her to a

They told him that back in the exams, the great Xmas "recupera- the Nova Scotian, with Les Single hills of Tennessee there was a tion," and the recuperation after dealing out the decibels. Judging cave whose waters, once tasted, chained the drinker to the hills are advised to get their tickets speaks of love, for once a man tastes of the wine of first love he is chained to its memory forever.

Love of the hills, love of woman, opponent Saturday at 2.00, when ified success, both financially and love of God-different purposes but the same emotion. In each case it is a myth, a creature of the imagination, a picture and a retreat that each man uses to soften the unpleasantries of life and to see the world as he would

> Such as this is love: "-you'll never know how much I miss you. I'm so in love, I cannot sleep and our love possesses me". And so a myth, a vision is formed, and if fate frustrates the romance the vision will remain, burning in the heart forever and destroying the very capability to love like that again, making of future loves a comparative and superficial thing. For the heart is free no longer and the perfection of the memories maintain their everlasting effect. So the vision lives on commanding always that any new infatuation must find expression in

However this thing we name love, that in fact is so unreal and diverse, and in effect so real; that is so pure and yet so commercialized; so good and yet so evil, is old while young, inevitable while uncertain, and in every phase is inexplicable in its own complexity.

Bacon once said one cannot love and yet be wise. How pathetically true. Anthony's sacrifice of honour for Egypt's queen; or the blood that spilled for Helen's beauty is indicative of how wisdom knows not the aid of love. For love, no matter how essential, is a weakness. As the bloom of wisdom falls beneath its stroke, love's devitalizing power will undermine the growth of art also, so that its culture dies easily under love's sensuous hand.

Then A.J. thought of Catanna. That love then, he said, though lost, must live forever, but only in memory. The sorrow is that it will never be realistically recaptured. And so this bitter conclusion was that love exists merely to destroy, to give and then to take away; to replace beauty with the gnawing emptiness of unhappiness. Am I ever, he thought, to go searching vainly, hoping to find my vision and knowing it cannot be found? And these lines he recalled sadly:

"One love grows green when one turns gray,

This year knows nothing of last year,

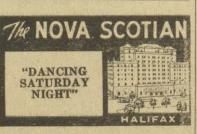

Tomorrow has no more to say, To yesterday

Federal Aid Brief Presented January 20

A 31-page brief prepared by the National Federation of Canadian University Students will be submitted to the Royal Commission on Arts Science and Letters in Halifax.

Richey Love, Amherst student at Dalhousie University Law School and president of N.F.C.U.S. announced last night the brief would be submitted to the Royal Commission at Province House, Friday, January 20th.

A summation of two years' work by N.F.C.U.S. committees across Canada, the brief deals with:

1. Federal Scholarships and grants-in-aid to university students with high scholastic standing.

2. Help in the form of loans to university students who do not qualify under section 1.

3. Views and recommendations on the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

Making the submission will be Richey Love; Jack Madden of the University of Toronto, a former editor of The Manitoban, student newspaper at the University of Manitoba, and a possible third member, Gilles Bergerons, president of the Student Union of the University of Montreal.

The brief represents the findings of N.F.C.U.S. committees and inquiry groups initiated as early as 1947.

At the federation's annual conference in Montreal in December, 1948, a student committee was formed to look into the cost of education for the average university student in Canada. This supplemented similar investigation carried out in 1947 by the N.F.C.U.S. scholarship inquiry committee.

The report of the 1948 committees, operating at the University of British Columbia and the University of Toronto was presented to the National Conference of Canadian Universities in Halifax in June, 1949 by a committee consisting of Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, Ross Hamilton and Richey Love.

At this meeting it was decided that both groups, N.F.C.U.S. and N.C.C.N. would present briefs to the Royal Commission. The N.C.C.U. brief was presented in Ottawa in July.

PROS AND CONS

By DAVE JANIGAN

Whether or not you are a keen supporter of the game of basketball, you have to acknowledge the amazing progress the game has made here in Halifax. A few years ago the game was confined to the "experimental" few who, like unsung heroes, played the game before scant crowds and tolerable criticisms. Now the craze is well pronounced. This is well shown by the number of leagues that are in operation. So now more people than ever are playing basketball; even in Hollywood those celestial forms called "stars" are taking to the game. (It is interesting to note that the most effective style of offence is called the screen play.) So far this paragraph has been devoted to illustrating the growing popularity of the game. Now comes a plug for the initiation of a Dominion Inter-collegiate League. Canadian universities could be incorporated into different conferences according to their geographic location and the winners of these conferences play for the Dominion title. In other words, just like the "States".

Tomorrow night the Dalhousie squad will face a team which has already established a legendary aspect due to a player called "Bozo" Johnson. The game should feature play on a par with the calibre of action in the St. John-Atlantic game. Like all pals, we should get out and cheer for the team.

Boxing, the only sport that features queer nasal sounds (except perhaps bullfighting) is collecting momentum on the campus with the Intercollegiate meet soon on tap. Many have turned out to contest as representatives for the eight weight divisions.

Last Saturday Mr. Dick Birch stifled the efforts of Noel Hamilton and Dick Rouse in a sprightly exhibition of badminton. The Dal boys showed more ability and finesse than had been attributed to them. As for Mr. Birch himself, he displayed his powers like an old master as far as badminton was concerned. but his cogent remarks and his beaming smiles were as annoying as a subdued burp. One comes to an athletic event to see the sport and not a couple of rows of dental ability. Perhaps this observer is a little too harsh and biased about Mr. Birch. After all, professional men develop secondary personalities. Actors, for instance, develop a stage personality aside from their own. I guess I should have deduced that Mr. Birch has a "bird" personality.

We are informed that, contrary to the opinion of the ever-present groaners 'round the campus, the Varsity hockey squad is surprisingly strong. The boys have a dark horse in the person of John McKinnon, late of the Antigonish Bulldogs, and are all set for their big annual trip to Grand Falls. On the 27th of this month they leave, by plane, no less (no more dog sleds for our boys) for the Isle of Newfiejohn .-Brickbats to Mr. Fred Kelly for not sending us a copy of the Intercollegiate schedule. Nobody knows who plays who or where.

The Arts & Science entry in the Interfaculty Basketball League defeated a hapless but energetic Pre-Med team 47-19. The Arts and Science team lead by Dave 'Spider' Janigan, and Jack 'Hooker' Schwartz took the lead early in the first half and were never in danger of losing it for the rest of the game. The score at half time was 15-12 in favor of A & Sc.

The second quarter opened with a bang, the bang of human bodies flying about. This half was characterized by rough play, "Ozark Tke" peg shots, and ragged refereehalf alone. In one of the roughest basketball games seen this year in the Halifax Intermediate Basketball League, Dalhousie Flying Tigers added to their string of victories by trimming the Stadacona Sailors, by a 57-27 score. The Navy were aided by the stellar floor work of big Ed Healy, former South End star. The South End squad, cellar-dwellers since the start of the season, have dropped out of the league, and the Sailors were lucky enough to grab Healy, one of the loop's leading scorers, before his former team-mates, the Grads, could sign him up.

The contest took place on Tuesday night at the Shearwater Gym as the opening attraction of a double-header. In the wind-up the Grads topped the Shearwater squad by a 59-33 score.

scoring with a long set-shot. The hook shots and a foul to close the Tanner came up with the sweetest page as he dropped in three straight one-handers from center on the heavy end of a 27-12 tally.

As the second half started, Mahon, Henderson, and Connelly teamed up to score 19 points in four minutes with only one reutrn from the Navy. Grads are in consecutive baskets, and two foul second place, with one loss in five ing. There were a total of 17 fouls shots to lead 10-2. Kitchen of games followed by Navy with two called on both teams during this Navy countered with two nice wins. Shearwater trails the pack with one win and four losses. Big news of the week comes from the Grads who have obtained the service of big "Doc" Accocella, former Fordham star, and during the baseball season, hard hitting

Too bad they couldn't have grabbed Ed Healy also.
