outreach tutoring

In the North-end of Halifax, particularly in the public housing area of Mulgrave Park, it was suggested that a need existed for a program offering individual attention to children who were having difficulties in their schoolwork. Based on this fact, Vieth House, a community centre, proposed to the student councils of Dalhousie and Mount Saint Vincent Universities in the fall of 1970 that, for an expenditure of little time and money, a tutoring program could be established using university students as tutors. The tutoring would be done on a set evening once a week in the child's home, on a one-to-one basis.

For the first two years of operation, OutReach ran on a small scale, relying mainly on word of mouth contacts to interest university students and parents. The program ran with about 60 tutors and 60 students involved. At the end of the first year the tutors recommended that OutReach Tutoring be expanded for the following year, but due to lack of funds and organization the second year ran with about the same number as the first year. At the end of the second year, after realizing that one person alone can't run the program effectively, four student co-ordinators, all of whom had tutored the previous year, were chosen to run the project for 1972-73. One of the student co-ordinators worked for the summer to organize the program for the following year and the University granted the project free use of an office in the Transitional Year Program House on University Avenue. The Dalhousie Student Union granted a budget of $1400.00 to run the program and OutReach was on the way. This year nine schools have been contacted with a potential of 2500 students between the grades of 4 to 9 who could take part in the program.

The co-ordinators held introductory meetings and a one-day workshop in the fall, prepared a resource kit and went to work with its 100 volunteers. They started a remedial reading program and have helped to initiate a community school in Spryfield. This is a centre for child and adult activities which involves the Spryfield community in decision-making projects that affect recreation and education.

A third pilot project began this fall was with the Dalhousie Faculty of Physical Education where, with the aid of Dr. Norman Watts, a physical education professor at Dalhousie, and the Halifax City Department of Recreation, Saturday recreation projects have been set up in select North-End schools using second year physical education students.

With the help of OutReach Tutoring, a project is being undertaken by the University of King's College to tutor approximately 15 students from Ross Road School in Preston. These students will be tutored by King's students and will have access to the swimming pool as well as to the gymnasium.

Other projects and ideas are being planned, but it is clear that OutReach has two main aims — to provide a necessary volunteer tutoring service for children in Halifax who need it and to help initiate new projects that will eventually become self-sufficient.

Any Alumni who is interested in OutReach should get in touch with Michael Lynk, c/o The Transitional Year Program House, 6034 University Avenue, Halifax, N.S., or call him at 422-5833. There is an ever-increasing need for tutors — the only remuneration is a rewarding experience for an alumnus with a bit of time on his hands.

To Open A Door

Tutoring is a learning experience. I accuse myself of ambiguity; let me clarify the statement by saying that I have learned, perhaps more than he himself, from my student. While I was impressing the rules of silent letters, the phonics of long vowels and the mysteries which can be discovered within books, upon my young captive - he was giving to me the humor of innocence, a renewed love for people, the vision of the whole world as a future, as his future and mine.

Tutoring is something which I had never participated in before. I had always had an underlying lack of confidence in my ability to tutor anyone, and until now this acted as a block to any willing enthusiasm I may have had. It also acted in direct conflict to my desire to teach. Therefore tutoring served two purposes - as a testing ground of my ability to teach. For the past five months its been quite an experience.

I tutor a ten year old boy in remedial reading. Presently he is in a "slow" grade four class, yet his reading level is below grade three. Reading is not his only poor subject, low motivation to learn leads to bad marks in all his courses. His home environment is pleasant though not conducive to the pursuit of education. In this I mean that he is not expected to do well or to achieve a high level of education. I have found this to be the hardest lesson to teach, the highest obstacle to overcome, and yet the primary goal to reach. He must understand the importance of what he is doing before he can want to do it. His mind must be open and receptive. Once we can do that, or at least open the door a crack, then we can proceed to work on the reading.

Twice a week we meet, twice a week I see more and more of this child, how he thinks, what he does and doesn't like, what he expects and wants from school and life. Sometimes we drill phonics, other times we work on expression in reading, still others we just talk; conversation brings words, and the understanding of the connection between the words of thought, the spoken word and the written word is most important.

My desire to teach has increased greatly; my desire to learn has increased even more.

Farley Mowat was guest of honour at the Association's Newfoundland Night held in November. He is shown above with Marilyn MacDonald of the Association's Board of Directors, who interviewed him.

More than 400 Halifax area Alumni attended dinner in the McInnes Room to hear Farley Mowat, noted Canadian author.

Bruce G. Irwin, Director of Alumni Affairs, recently made a trip through western Canada to visit Alumni, attend a Directors' meeting of the Canadian Association of University Development Officers and to participate in a Seminar on Bequests and Taxation Legislation.

Mr. Irwin met a group of Alumni in Winnipeg at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carmen Moir on February 19. On February 20 he attended a reception for Calgary Alumni which had been arranged by Derek S. Jones. The next day he travelled to Victoria for a Directors' meeting of CAUDO. Mr. Irwin is the 1972-73 Secretary-Treasurer of CAUDO, the sponsoring organization of the two-day seminar on Bequests and Taxation Legislation.

On February 23, Mr. Irwin met with several alumni in Vancouver who are interested in forming a branch of the Alumni Association there.

New York Branch Meets

The Dalhousie Club of New York held its annual 1972 dinner at the Canadian Club in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel on November 25. About 85 guests attended including, as guests of honour Dr. and Mrs. Henry Hicks and Dr. Loyd B. MacPherson, dean of Dalhousie's Medical School and Mrs. MacPherson.

The dinner was preceded by a reception in the Canadian Club's lounge. After dinner Dr. MacPherson told the interested guests of recent developments at the Medical School and the substantial hospital complex with which it is connected. Dr. and Mrs. Hicks' stop in New York was on their way home from their visits to the University of Guyana and the University of Havana. Thus appropriately Dr. Hicks' remarks were principally in connection with his visits to these institutions, and the guests listened with interest and fascination to his observations on the conditions at these striving universities, their aspirations and their efforts to attain them.

The presiding officer was Dr. Seymour S. Balkin, the club's president. Mr. Warren Publicover, secretary, introduced the speakers.

REUNIONS

Initial response for the reunions scheduled this year ('23, '33 and '48) has been large. The reunions will be held on campus on May 14 - May 17 and will highlight class dinners, a lobster party, campus tours, attendance at the Association's Annual Meeting. Any member of the reunion class who wants further information can contact the Alumni Office. Everett Mosely '23, George Thompson '33, and Bruce Cochrane '48 are the reunion chairmen. A complete program will be mailed to class members in April.

Nursing Alumni Association Formed

The Association hosted a Wine and Cheese party for the first planning meeting of the Dalhousie Nursing Alumni Association.

Miss Electa MacLennan, R.N., who provided leadership and service for over 20 years as director of the School for Nursing at Dalhousie University, received tributes from friends and students for her many achievements in the field, on her recent nomination as honorary president of the newly formed Dalhousie Nursing Alumni Association.

One of the highlights of the testimonial dinner held in her honour on February 15 was a featurette entitled "This is Your Life" — a nostalgic commentary on her personal life and her nursing career, with pictures, notes and tapes gathered from those who knew her best.

The occasion also marked the first meeting of the Dalhousie Nursing Alumni Association. The association has come about in response to interest shown by graduates who wish to keep in touch with developments in the School of Nursing and Dalhousie generally.

The new executive members include: Karen Mann, president; Elizabeth Buffett, vice-president; Fran Gregor, publicity; Florence Zussman and Dolores Wilmhurst, program directors; Linda Mosher, secretary-treasurer; and Jean Cox, representative to the Dalhousie Alumni Association.

Campus Notes

Dalhousie and Mount Saint Vincent universities will offer over 100 classes in 25 disciplines during two summer sessions as part of their combined summer school operation. The cooperative program, which is a continuation of an integrated venture begun last year, was established to provide a sound educational and financial arrangement and at the same time make available to students a three-year projection of class offerings.

Special features of the summer session include a class in comparative education to be conducted at Dalhousie and the University of Bristol, England; a six-week Family Life Institute offered at Mount Saint Vincent and worth two class credits; and a number of mathematics classes which will be available through the Canadian Mathematical Congress sessions taking place at Dalhousie.

For information on admissions, fees, counselling and accommodation, write or phone the Director of the Summer School at Dalhousie or Mount Saint Vincent.

The appointment of Dr. Norman Horrocks as director of Dalhousie's School of Library Service has been announced by Dr. Henry Hicks. Dr. Horrocks joined the Dalhousie faculty in 1971. He began his professional career at the Manchester Public Libraries, England and was elected a Fellow of the Library Association of the United Kingdom in 1952. Late in 1956 he moved to Perth, Australia to become technical librarian and information officer at the State Library. In 1963 he became a teaching fellow at the Graduate School of Library and Information Services at the University of Pittsburgh and joined the full time faculty in 1964. Since 1971 Dr. Horrocks has been editor of the Journal of Education for Librarianship, the official publication of the Association of American Library Schools.

Dalhousie's School of Library Service has been granted accreditation by the American Library Association, the recognized accrediting agency for graduate programs in librarianship in Canada and the United States. Dalhousie's is the 58th program to receive the recognition and the 7th in Canada.

The School of Library Service began operation in September 1965 and to date 65 M.L.S. degrees have been awarded. The school has 64 full-time and four part-time students enrolled in this academic year.

Bequests totalling close to $500,000 have been left to Dalhousie by Dr. Elizabeth Kilpatrick who graduated from the medical school in 1915 and became a prominent psychiatrist in the United States. Dr. Kilpatrick retired from her New York post in 1959, returned to Nova Scotia and was a part time psychiatry teacher at Dalhousie. She died in 1969.

In announcing the bequest, Dr. Hicks said that it would be used to assist the teaching program for medical students in the outpatient departments and psychiatric clinics affiliated with Dalhousie, in the training of young psychiatrists and for cancer research. He emphasized that only the income from the bequest would be used and the capital would remain in trust.

Two new McCulloch Professors at Dalhousie University have been appointed, bringing to three the number of McCulloch chairs now filled. The chairs were approved last year and are named after Rev. Thomas McCulloch, the first president of Dalhousie. Their establishment was designed to attract to Dalhousie scholars of rare distinction in the social sciences and humanities and to provide a complement to the Killam senior professorships in the scientific and engineering fields.

Dr. Malcolm M. Ross, McCulloch Professor of English, is one of Canada's most distinguished scholars in English literature. He has taught at the universities of Alberta, Cornell, Indiana, Manitoba, Queen's and Trinity College, Toronto.

Shortly after arriving at Dalhousie, Dr. Ross was appointed chairman of the university's general Committee on Cultural Activities, serving for three years; during his term of office the multi-purpose Arts Centre was opened. Dr. Ross is editor of Canadian Writers, a new venture that is a sub-series of the New Canadian Library, he was president of the Royal Society of Canada, Section II (Humanities and Social Sciences) in 1970-71, he was a member of the first academic panel of the Canada Council, the Gaudry Committee on Research, the board of directors of the Neptune Theatre and is a member of several Canada Council awards committees.

Dr. Wilfred Cantwell Smith, a world-renowned authority on Islamic and general religious studies, has been appointed McCulloch Professor of religious studies and chairman of the department. He is at present professor of religion and director of the Centre for the Study of World Religions at Harvard. Dr. Smith is the author of more than 50 papers and articles. His five books have been translated into several languages. Dr. Smith worked with World Missions in India from 1949 to 1963. He was Birks Professor of Religion and Director of the Institute of Islamic Studies at McGill University, and has been visiting professor at the University of London, Princeton and Toronto. He is editorial adviser to Muslim World and the Middle East Journal. Prof. Smith is a fellow of the Royal Society of Canada and of the American Academy of Sciences.

University Finances Critical

Campus Notes

— Notes from a statement by Dr. Henry D. Hicks on the present financial situation at Dalhousie.

While the 1960s may have been difficult years for universities in the area of student-staff relations, university administrators will probably look back on them as years that were reasonably good insofar as financing was concerned.

We now face a situation at Dalhousie that is quite different from any we have experienced in the last decade and while that situation is serious we are taking remedial action.

Our difficulties were brought sharply into focus in September, the beginning of the academic year, when our enrolment fell short of the number we anticipated. It was forecast during the 1960s and early 70s that enrolment in Nova Scotia universities would continue to rise steadily through the 70s and into the 80s and would level off when about 25,000 students were enrolled. Up to 1970-71 the enrolment was running ahead of forecast. . . . this year all but one of the universities in the province reported enrolments smaller than they had anticipated.

At Dalhousie we have slightly fewer full-time students than we had last year. We estimated we would have about 6,800 but we have 6,068. Enrolment is a major factor in our financial operations and has a great effect on the budget of the university.

When we found we had 700 fewer full-time students than we had expected (and our expectation was not simply optimism but rather accurate estimating based on the number of applicants and inquiries about admission from people who, as it turned out, did not present themselves at registration time), we scrutinized our budget, and with a very understanding and, in some cases, self-sacrificing attitude on the part of the Deans of the Faculties and heads of departments, we were able to cut about half a million dollars from our budget and this just about matched the loss in revenue we encountered because of the low enrolment.

Dalhousie, like all of Nova Scotia's universities, is now largely dependent on government funds (and the provincial government, by the way, recovers a large portion of its education expenditures from the federal government).

For the current year, we asked the provincial government to make us a grant of just over $21 million. We received $17.9 million, which caused us to do a great deal more budget-paring. Even so, we approved a spending budget of nearly $32 million, and this left us with an operating deficit of about $400,000. This was not our first deficit. . . . Under the circumstances of the continuing growth which we thought, justifiably I think, would carry on through most of the 1970s, the deficit financing did not seem unreasonable.

If, however, our growth is going to level off and we do not enrol many more than the 6,000 full-time students we now have, we may have to plan a major change of direction.

On the expenditure side of our budget (and over the years, our spending items have varied only a few percentage points), salaries are taking between 54 and 55 per cent, library books and periodicals just over 2 per cent, scholarships, bursaries and prizes about 4 per cent, restricted funds about 6 per cent, physical plant maintenance about 9 per cent, general administrative expenses between 13 and 14 per cent, and other academic expenses, such as special appointments and university research between 10 and 11 per cent.

We estimate that for 1973-74, we will require $35.5 million to operate the university. This represents an increase of 11 per cent over the current year's budget figure. We also estimate that our non-government revenue will be $14.25 million, so we have had to ask the government for a grant of $21.25 million.

A Special Report

This is less than the amount we asked for last year, but it should be remembered that when we asked for $21.5 million, we received $17.9 million. It should be borne in mind that if we get an increase of 10 per cent in the government grant, that 10 per cent applies only to two-thirds of our budget which, applied to our total budget figure, would mean an overall increase of between 6 and 7 per cent.

The predictions are that we will receive a government grant for next year only 7 per cent higher than this year's; if this is the case, our financial position will be extremely difficult.

On top of this is the annual problem of never receiving information about the level of support we can expect as early as we would like to get it. We must submit our budget in September or October to the University Grants Committee for the university's financial year which begins the following July. Usually we get advice about the forthcoming grant in March or April, which is so late as to make it difficult for us to plan ahead properly and to readjust our budget.

If we are in a situation bordering on a crisis, and I think we are, what remedial steps can we take?

First, I do not think that because we face difficulties now we should abandon all our plans for the future, but we must all work harder during the remaining years of the 1970s to maintain the quality of our teaching, our research and our obligations to our students, our staff and our public.

It has been suggested that we dispose of some of the assets in our endowment fund and thus clear off our deficits. Even if we could do this our operating position would not be improved significantly. We would stop paying interest to the bank, but we would also stop earning revenue from the endowment fund.

How can we pare our budget? First, we never like to have to cut salaries and I hope we will never have to do so. This means that more than half our budget cannot be touched. We are looking carefully at our staffing situation, particularly in the making of appointments and at replacements in any area of the university.

Another way we will continue to economize is to look closely at our course offerings to see whether we are offering too many that attract only a few students.

We are also re-examining our purchasing practices and, where possible, the purchase of additional equipment and supplies is being deferred. This also applies to renovations.

What are we doing and have to do cannot be done by only a few people in the Dalhousie community. The difficult tasks ahead require and are receiving the cooperation of all those in the many academic and administrative departments who are charged with the responsibility of making the best use of our resources, human and otherwise.

Finally we must couple with our belt-tightening measures, greater efforts to convince not only the University Grants Committee, and through the committee the government, but also the public that our funds are being well-spent and monitored and our other resources are being used properly.

Ford Foundation Grant Approved

The Ford Foundation has approved a grant of $225,000 to Dalhousie University for the establishment of a Government Studies Program in conjunction with the Government of Nova Scotia.

The award was announced jointly in December by Premier Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia and Dr. Henry D. Hicks, President of Dalhousie. The main purpose of the program is to provide the government with the means of obtaining independent, objective analyses of some of its medium and long-range policy problems.

Both Premier Regan and Dr. Hicks said they were pleased with Ford's approval of the program because it meant the government would be able to make more effective use of its research expenditures by being able to call on a large pool of available local talent, and it would also strengthen the already close ties that exist between the government and the university.

In a statement, McGeorge Bundy, President of the Ford Foundation, praised the government studies program as one which would provide a unique opportunity to link academic research with public decision-making processes.

In its proposal to the foundation, the university said that the government was faced with many medium and long-range policy problems that required extensive research and analysis before a policy could be established.

Consequently there was a need for the government to have available an interdisciplinary group of experts who could analyse such policy problems.

The cost of maintaining a permanent full-scale governmental think-tank on a year-round basis was prohibitive, because the staff of such a think-tank would have to include experts from a large number of disciplines in order to handle a wide variety of problems referred to it by the government.

The government's needs, said the university proposal to the foundation, could be met by the establishment of a government studies program at Dalhousie.

The staff of the program will consist of small, interdisciplinary teams of faculty members assembled to work on specific policy problems submitted to them by the government. The teams' part-time assignments will end when each project is completed.

A program staffed in this way will provide the government with the think-tank it needs without the province having to incur the heavy cost of operating the think-tank on a permanent basis.

Moreover, because Dalhousie is in the provincial capital, it will be possible to establish close and effective co-operation and communication between university personnel and the government. (Close ties already exist: Dr. Hicks, the president of Dalhousie, is a former Premier of Nova Scotia; Vice-President W.A. MacKay, a former Dean of Law at Dalhousie, is chairman of the Nova Scotia Human Rights Commission; Dr. F.R. Hayes, a former vice-president of Dalhousie and a former chairman of the Fisheries Research Board of Canada, has returned to Dalhousie as a research professor in biology; Dr. John F. Graham, a former chairman of Dalhousie's Economics Department, is on leave to serve as chairman of the Nova Scotia Royal Commission on Education, Taxation and Municipal Affairs; and Professor E.C. Harris of the law school, is one of the Graham commissioners and is also chairman of Halifax Transit Commission.)

The program would build upon an existing base of confidence which was essential if the government was to take seriously the policy options presented to it by the program, said the university's proposal. It was important, therefore, to emphasize that Dalhousie is an independent institution and not state-controlled; independence was essential if the staff of the program were to undertake an analysis of the policy problems in an objective, non-political environment. . . . .

Research personnel in the program will be retained for specific projects; primarily they will be from Dalhousie, but some will be drawn from the faculties of other universities in the Maritimes. They will work part-time on policy problems referred to the program by the government.

Policy problems will be examined not only in the Nova Scotia context but also in terms of their applicability to comparable political, social and economic situations elsewhere in the world.

The program will be administered by Professor Ronald St. John Macdonald, Dean of the Faculty of Law at Dalhousie.

Overall direction of the program will be determined by a seven-man board of directors composed of three representatives of the government, three from the university and Dean Macdonald. On the board of directors are, from the government, Innis MacLeod, QC, deputy minister, Executive Council Office; Ron Johnson, secretary of the Treasury Board; and Dr. M.J.L. Kirby, principal assistant to the Premier. The Dalhousie representatives are Dr. G.R. MacLean, Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Science; Kell Antoft, assistant director of the Institute of Public Affairs; and Lorne O. Clark, QC, a member of the Board of Governors.

Law Class '69 Pay Tribute

When Professor R.T. (Bob) Donald, Dean of Law at Dalhousie died in October 1971, a few members of the law class of 1969, meeting informally in Toronto, decided to do something by which he could be remembered.

Paul Young, a member of the Class of '69, told a packed auditorium in the Weldon Law Building of the result. Because of the law school's traditional liking for portraits of former deans, a group of 1969 graduates decided to commission a portrait of the late Dean Donald. "We had 100 per cent response to our appeal from members of the class," said Mr. Young. A tribute in itself.

More than 250 faculty, staff, alumni and students, in addition to local dignitaries and members of the Donald family from Ontario, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island were on hand for the unveiling of the portrait by Mrs. Donald. The portrait was painted by Eva Prager, of Montreal, who also painted the one of Vincent C. MacDonald who was Dean of the Law School from 1934 to 1949.

MEMORIAL FUND ESTABLISHED

From time to time at Dalhousie contributions have been made to the University as a memorial subscription in honour of some student or former student. Until now there has been no proper into which these funds could be channelled. Because of these occurrences a Dalhousie Memorial Bursary Fund had been established.

The existence of the fund will be commemorated by a book of remembrance to be located in a prominent place in the University (e.g. the rotunda of the Arts and Administration Building or in the Library). Names of persons in whose memory contributions of twenty-five dollars or more, made by relatives, friends, individuals or groups, to the Memorial Fund will be recorded in the book, along with the date of their birth and death. The pages would be turned on a regular basis.

All money contributed to the Fund will be invested by the Board of Governors and only the investment income will be awarded. The award will be available to any full time Dalhousie student, already registered and in attendance at classes, who can show a need for additional support over and above the resources of the Provincial and Federal Loans or University scholarships.

All contributions to the Memorial Fund will be directed through the Dalhousie Annual Fund. Any Alumni wishing further information could get in touch with the Alumni Office, Student Union Building, Dalhousie University.
