Dear Ms Brody:

Just the day I left for an extended overseas trip, on September 24, I read your excellent article, "Child's stay in hospital often traumatic event." It is a very useful piece.

It just so happened that just before I read your article, I received a book from a very good friend of mine in Italy, Lucia Tumiatì -- on the very subject you were dealing with. It is a charmingly written book, and I am sending it along. Would it not be useful to publish such a book in the States? of course the book would have to be translated, but that would not be a problem. I am sending it in Italian as it is. If you have a publisher in mind who might be interested in taking it -- perhaps that publisher has some scout who reads Italian. Otherwise, I could translate a few sample pages. I am not doing that right now, because I just got back last night, and am leaving again tomorrow for Mexico, but I could do it later.

Incidentally, Lucia is now writing a book for children who have to be prepared to cope with the fact that they have been adopted. I think that is another very good idea.

I'll be back home on November 1, and it would be very very nice to hear from you.

With all good wishes,

Sincerely yours,

Elisabeth Mann Borgese

Dear Mrs. Borgese:

Please forgive the delay in replying, and so as not to keep you waiting any longer, I am writing on William Shawn's behalf. Unfortunately, your story did not work out here, interesting though it was. Thank you, however, for letting Mr. Shawn see your work.

Sincerely,

Laurie Witkin

Dear Ms. Borghese:

The National Geographic Magazine is producing a major article on the Mediterranean. The thrust will be primarily the physical and ecological aspects of the sea. I'd like to focus some on aquaculture prospects in the Mediterranean. I understand this is your area of expertise. I'd also like to know more about your institute. I will be in the Mediterranean a great deal over the next year or so. I'd like to meet with you. Do you know when you will be in Malta? What is the best way to contact you?

Thank you for your considerations.

Sincerely,
