Charlottetown Pride

By Michael Doiron

This year, Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, will celebrate its ten-year anniversary of Pride in full force. This year's theme is "Diamonds are Forever," in keeping with the tenth year traditional gift. As we are all little gems we invite everyone to come and party on our Island and take part in one of the biggest bashes we have ever held in the history of Pride in our province. Events will be held during the week of July 4-12. There's something for everybody!

This year we're inviting all Drag Queens to come and help us in our parade by strutting their stuff and exploding with as much glitz, glam and glitter they can manage.

We're also inviting any Maritime business that wants to promote their business by putting a float in the Pride parade to send us an e-mail at www.arcofpei.com. This is a great way to promote Island business and have fun at the same time.

The Pride 2008 schedule appears below.

Northern AIDS Connection Society Art Auction

by Denise Holliday

Having never attended an art auction before, I was perhaps a little intimidated at the prospect. The Best Western Glengarry has an established reputation as the swankiest hotel in the town of Truro and has been the location of this event for seven years now and the setting, parking and hotel staff were of the highest caliber.

I was met at the door by the organizing crew and after snapping that picture I turned to be met by a room display that I have only seen in museums prior to this. Beautiful arrays of paintings, pottery, sculptures, quilting, and literary pieces; all donated, most of them by local artists. Half the room had tables laid and a wall of refreshments that was soon to be devoured.

The donations were from established local and international artists, including an upcoming 17-year-old student artist from Truro and an anonymous annual baby quilt donation from a mother who lost a son to AIDS and now provides quilts to give to those living with HIV.

Bidding on crafts made from glass and brass, glazed pottery, and magnificent quilt sets proved to be tough.

Of course, the big issue with me was personal finances and I was amazed at the range of bidding. Some items that were worth far more went for under $30 probably because, like me, people were holding out for the special item they desired. Some items were, as expected, bringing three-figure bids.

I even went $5 over my personal budget in a bid to own a beautiful figurine of a ballet dancer that Rob Marshall of New Glasgow donated from his store, Swan Lake Sculpture. It went for $50 more than I could afford and as the lady walked around with the beautiful figurine that her husband had successfully bid on, I could tell it had found a home that would appreciate it.

Al McNutt, as always, was a quiet and yet ever present power in the room. He rightly emphasized that while fund raising was the financial goal, the main and most important aspect to Northern AIDS Connection Society was awareness and to see the seats filled with such an assortment of people with such a wide variety of backgrounds was to him the most exciting part of the evening.

While Larry Baxter of Nova Scotia Advisory Commission on AIDS spoke in support of the work and the room was filled with people from the surrounding areas that proved the impression that the Truro mayor left—with his unpleasant flag incident—that everyone in Truro was small-minded and unsupportive was in NO way representative of the general population. These were representatives from all walks of life who had gathered funds by all kind of means and brought them along for a supportive time and in a way that said we believe in supporting this important issue. The Board of NACS was very pleased and grateful for the support shown.

I was quietly reminded by Al McNutt that even though this year's event is over, crafts, paintings and other items are being collected for next year's Arts Auction. Please let your artistic friends know they have an opportunity to assist. Perhaps you can start a jar in the kitchen or at your local group and join NACS next year for an amazing evening of fellowship, culture and support in the fight against AIDS, because AIDS does truly affect us all.

Sexual Health Centre of Lunenburg County

Submitted by Carol Rock, BSc (HEd)
Executive Director and Health Educator

The Sexual Health Centre for Lunenburg County had a busy spring, which is the norm for us. Spring is when many teachers do the "Sexual Health" unit of the Personal Development and Relationships (PDR) course, so in turn, we have an increase in requests for school presentations and calls from teachers looking for assistance. We also see an increase in client drop-ins and phone calls.

This year, on top of the regular high demand, we celebrated International Day Against Homophobia by offering presentations on the subject to junior and senior high school students, around the week of May 17. With an overwhelming response, the presentations spread throughout May and into June. We completed a whopping 33 presentations just on the topic of respecting sexual orientation to seven of our eight junior high schools and one of five high schools. We received great feedback from both students and teachers. Almost 700 students received our own pamphlets, and thanks to the Youth Project in Halifax, the schools all received a few copies of the PFLAG poster, "That's So Gay" is So Yesterday."

As we wind down the season (inadequate funding forces an annual summer closure; this year from June 20 to September 15) our dedicated volunteer board will remain hard at work planning events for our 20th anniversary in the fall. It's hard to believe we've been here for that long. Time flies when you're having fun. So if you live nearby, stay tuned to what's going to happen in the fall!

For questions, contact: Executive Director Carol Rock, 527-2868 (before June 20) or 543-2423 (home, after June 20.)

Truro Banner

By Paula Arsenaault

We may not be able to fly a rainbow flag in Truro—but we sure can hang our banner!

So, begins a busy summer for our Rainbow Proud group. The Rainbow Proud group is participating in several Diversity Week events being held in Truro and area during the week of June 28 through July 5.

We'll kick off the week there will be a Canada Day-themed dance on June 28, from 8:00 p.m. to midnight, held at the Truro Lions Club, 1100 Prince Street. The event is restricted to those 19 and over, and the cost is only $8. T-shirts with an embroidered Rainbow Proud logo will be for sale at the dance and all summer events at a cost of $15.

During the Diversity Parade the Rainbow Proud group will be present on foot and in a van. The parade will be held in Bible Hill on July 1 and is scheduled to start around 10:00 a.m. The group is sponsoring an educational movie, "The Truth about Jane," on the evening of July 2 at St. Andrews United Church. On July 12, we take to the water by canoe on the Stewiacke River. Landlubbers can still join in at the barbecue held afterward at the Stewiacke River Park.

As a new group we hope to be able to support various neighbouring rainbow community events in Cumberland and Pictou counties. The next meeting for Rainbow Proud will be held September 7 at 1:00 p.m. at the Truro Library. Plans are in the works for a disco-themed Halloween Dance, complete with a talent show, so get ready to get up and boogie.

We are available to answer questions by e-mail at rainbowproud@hotmail.com. You can check out our website, which will soon be on line at www.rainbowproudnovascotia.ca.

Pictou Flag Raising

Excerpt of speech given by Gerard Veldhoven, Chair, Cumberland Pride, at the flag raising on May 17.

Here we are in the beautiful town of Pictou witnessing the raising of the Pride flag. What a wonderful sight it is and indeed, we praise town council for their positive attitude towards the GLBT community

On of the reasons we are here is to celebrate the town's embrace of the GLBT community and its obvious respect for diversity. However, all is not well. We rally against Pictou county council and others, as they changed their flag policy to fly only government flags. They do not recognize the diversity of the citizens of this county. It has become almost commonplace to do just that.

Since last year we have learned about Truro town council and mayor Bill Mills, who used the Bible to support his homophobic rhetoric. Kay Chisholm, mayor of Antigonish, initially had shown support to fly the Pride flag, but then changed her mind. Pictou county council is one of several jurisdictions in Nova Scotia to stand against embracing diversity, thereby choosing to separate instead of unite the gay and straight communities.

On April 23, Cumberland county council decided to change its flag policy. Now only government and municipal flags will be hoisted. The decision was made almost immediately following a request by Cumberland Pride to raise the Pride flag. This kind of discrimination has become a practice that seems to be spreading in various parts of Nova Scotia.

Obviously, these councils change flag policies as soon as a request that a Pride flag be raised to celebrate our victories. These changes are not a coincidence, but a deliberate move to avoid flying the Pride flag. Why are these councils so against the gay and lesbian community? What are the mayors and councilors so afraid of?

Why are many jurisdictions supportive while others discriminate in such a blatant manner? These councils are determined to undermine the GLBT community by making us a scapegoat for other groups that have flown flags in the past, but now are no longer able to so. In effect we have become the bad guys. The point is that these councils have relegated us to the back seat of the bus, so to speak, by discriminating and homophobic action. In the process they leave other community groups in the dust without the possibility of raising their flags.

How naïve of them to think they can pull the wool over our eyes and declare, "We are not homophobic, and we certainly do

Crawford Hastie's KIBITZ AND BITCH

Hey Tom

Time for Pride here in Atlantic Canada. I used to talk about Pride Week, which meant Halifax Pride but now there are Pride activities happening in small towns and larger centres all over the east coast. Queer folk are reclaiming their space - I like to think of it as an expanding transparent force field, like a giant iridescent bubble with glinting rainbow highlights where the light strikes it; both pretty and useful. Some folks feel threatened by the bubble and see its growth as an encroachment on their havens of heterosexuality. They think this proliferation of queer Pride is just the thin edge of the wedge and they are absolutely right! Like the Scarlet Pimpernel - and how gay is that! We are here, there and everywhere; and always have been. For years bureaucrats, politicians and big business could pretend we didn't exist and some are uncomfortable now that that illusion has been taken away from them.

Even within the cities we are no longer sticking to our areas, refusing the restrictions of ghettos and villages. Guerrilla Gay Fare once a month "takes over" a straight bar for an evening. Nothing wrong with our gay bars but we have become greedy for choice. Freedom can be an intoxicating brew. We queer folk are the perfect examples of "Give them an inch and they'll take a mile." Actually in my case, give me an inch and I'll holler for more inches ... but that's a different topic.

The constantly asked and boring question of do we still need Pride Parades comes up every year and my answer is always yes. The fact that someone - gay, straight, trans or undecided- wants us to stop Pride Parades indicates discomfort with the public display and that in and of itself is significant. One purpose of Pride parades is protest against inequities but another purpose is celebration of who we are and our right to be seen, heard and acknowledged as part of the larger community.

And we have a right to expect some recognition of our contributions. I don't mean just in the normal professions like gay nurses, telephone repair people and fire fighters, I mean the truly unique things that we have given the world... like Camp! I found this definition of Camp: "something so outrageously artificial, affected, inappropriate or out-of-date as to be considered amusing. A style or mode of personal or creative expression that is absurdly exaggerated and fuses elements of high and popular culture. The dictionary also spoke of "exaggerated mannerisms exhibited especially by homosexuals." There! We queers created Camp and I think the world is a better place for it. I for one am proud to stand with my hands on my hips, a feather boa around my neck, one eyebrow arched and tell you how accepting Judy into my heart has changed my life. Maybe someday there will be flaming queers going door to door asking residents to consider putting more outrageousness in their lives, to add a splash of red or teal blue into their beige lives, to wear inappropriate underclothes under their three piece suit, to dance to Madonna while vacuuming, to add a maraschino cherry to the gin and tonic, to practice overdramatizing emotions rather than repressing them and to fight the general tendency of the world to crush individuality and to convince us to slip unnoticed through life. Maybe even summer Camp camp for queer kids to get in touch with their inner homo and learn how even a natural sylvan setting can benefit from a few decorative throw pillows and how beautifully a bon fire reflects on a mirror ball.

At least that's how I feel on my good days. On the bad days - or more often, nights - when I find myself eating mayonnaise and pepperoni sandwiches at 3 a.m. by the flickering TV light of a Judging Amy rerun...I'm not so sure. There is still a lot of "family" out there in the world who are not even at the point we were at fifty years ago, Tom. In the US, only Massachusetts and now California have same-sex marriage, and many states have little legal protection for LGBT citizens. And how about our own government? With Bills C-10 and C-484 the Harperites have already shown their desire to erode rights and freedoms.

And our brothers and sisters in Africa, Asia, the Middle East and lots of other places need our help, support and contact. Think of Pride Day as queer New Year's and make a resolution to start thinking internationally as well as locally. Let us be vocal and visible for those who still must hide who they really are.

Auntie Mame said, "Life is a banquet and most poor sons of bitches are starving to death." We've been taught to settle, to ask for little, to be grateful for the tiniest show of affection. Well I want more! More colour, more music, more laughter, more flamboyance, more outrageousness, more recognition dammit!

Internationally, nationally and locally....still lots of work to do, and a good start is by being as outrageous, flamboyant, loud, camp and queer as possible!

Happy Pride!

Crawford

Catch Up on BLT

By Sue Andrews

BLT women of Halifax sent out a question: "Do transgender women in Nova Scotia want to only have transgender women's groups or be a part of other women's groups in the community?"

The question received many replies, with lots of opinions and thoughts. We are learning more and more every day, to make BLT stronger. I was given permission to share one of the e-mails:

Dear Sue,

Being a transwoman myself and a member of BLT for well over a year, I think that BLT does a great job in providing a place to bring down the walls. While transgender issues are complex, this group is first and foremost a women's group. I believe the topics of safety, employment, family acceptance, law, medical community, social policies, and self-empowerment are core subjects that should be talked about within this group, as I believe they affect each and every one of us no matter what our backgrounds.

I also go to another group of just transwomen, put on by Capital Health. At this group we discuss things like: issues around post-op or pre-op; cost surrounding SRS surgery; voice training; bra fittings and hormone treatments.

I believe this is a good place to have those discussions. Now I'm not saying that we shouldn't or couldn't have these same discussions at BLT, but if there are 10 women at the group and I am the only transwoman there then I don't believe the atmosphere is right to talk about trans issues, and would rather talk about women's issues. Now that's just me.

I know that some other transwomen that I have met only feel comfortable around other transwomen and would be scared to go a women's group.

So, to answer the question: do the transgender women in Nova Scotia want to only have transgender women's group or be a part of other women's groups in the community?

I believe there is place and need in Nova Scotia for both groups! When I first started coming out I thought that the GLBT community was going to be the community I could find safety and comfort in. While generally this has been the case, I was very surprised by the amount of prejudice that runs through the community against transpeople. So we definitely need to be open and honest with each other and break down these walls.

I am worried about the transmen, though, as I do not see any place for them to go for support—even Capital Health, the very people who treat transmen, have no meetings that I know of.

The work of trans inclusion is critically important. I have no doubt that each of us doing our part will create a new world where it is safe and acceptable to express our gender in any form we choose. Ultimately, through each of us making our part of the world trans inclusive, we will help spread trans-friendly attitudes everywhere.

Hugs, Alana

Gay Men's Health

Be Proud—Get Tested

By Angus Campbell

First of all, let me preface this column by stating that the opinions expressed are mine and not necessarily those of my employer. I do not write this column on behalf of the ACNS. I write it as a personal contribution to my community, as do most volunteer contributors to GLBT newspapers.

Having said that, do you know your HIV status? According to the Canadian AIDS Society one in four HIV+ people in Canada don't know they are poz. When was the last time you were tested? I go every year as I consider it part of my social responsibility. If I were to test positive, I would want to know as soon as possible, and for a couple of reasons:

1 - My own health: I want to have full knowledge of my health. Call me a control freak, but I want to be able to make sound, informed decisions about my body, and I need to know the total picture in order to make them. If I were poz I would want to make extra efforts at staying healthy.

2 - The health of others: I would not want to pass on the virus. Did you know that the average person infects four to six others before they learn they have HIV? Healthcare workers are supposed to use universal precautions, but mistakes happen. In my opinion HIV prevention is everyone's responsibility, both positive and negative. There is no blame and there should be no stigma.

Really, I'm not telling anyone what to do, as this is a very private, individual choice. However, I'm curious as to why people wouldn't want to know. I can imagine that for some there are anonymity issues. Others might be stepping out on their partners and coming home with evidence of a blood test may set off some alarm bells. Still others say that testing is too stressful on them.

Let me sound the alarm, and I'm not judging, honestly. But consider this: how would you feel if you infected your partner, especially if they believed you are in a monogamous relationship? Sound impossible? It's not. I have three friends in Vancouver that got HIV this way.

If anonymity is an issue, then I recommend you travel to a different community. For example, some people in Sydney will drive to New Glasgow for testing to ensure that the HIV nurse, and anyone else, doesn't recognize them. That's smart thinking.

Some may claim they don't know where or how to get tested. I'm including a list for Atlantic Canada. You always search the for "HIV testing in province)" or call your local AIDS Service Organization. There's no need to feel any judgement or stigma. Every HIV nurse that I've ever met is there because they believe in total health, which includes sexual health. They know a lot and they're willing to share the information.

So for this year's pride, wherever you may be in Atlantic Canada, I say "Be Proud, Get Tested... Today!"

Cape Breton IDAH For the Love of a Queen, part II

by Peter Steele

The Cape Breton Regional Municipality (CBRM) marked International Day Against Homophobia with a barbecue, march and reception. Although it was the traditional long weekend to open cottages, and there was a possibility of a downpour, more than 30 people took their stand against homophobia to the streets of downtown Sydney. The event was a collaboration of the Pride Cape Breton Society, PFLAG Sydney, and the Nova Scotia Department of Health Addiction Services.

During the week leading up to May 17, the CBRM flew the Pride flag outside the administrative building to mark its support of its gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender community. Many thanks go out to our local newspaper, the Cape Breton Post, for their promotional article, and to CBC Radio, which hosted a more than 15-minute interview with this writer on its afternoon Mainstreet program. Both the newspaper and radio station also featured follow-up stories of the afternoon's activities. Their continued support is much appreciated, and always crucial in our goal to combat homophobia.

The event started with a free public barbecue along Sydney's waterfront boardwalk. There were lots of burgers and hotdogs donated by M&M Meats, an on-going supporter of our community. Condiments and refreshments were supplied by NS Department of Health (NSDH) Addiction Services, who also handed out their individual Pride flags to those in attendance.

During the noon hour barbecue, people stopped by to express their support, and some stayed to socialize and join the walk. After a short rallying call, participants from the gay and straight communities took to the sidewalks of downtown Sydney where they were greeted with support from onlookers and passing cars.

Did we make progress in fighting homophobia? Well, we like to think so, for every time we take a stand, we are that much closer to ridding our communities of this dreadful scourge. We all make a huge difference each time we speak out against homophobia!

By Tim Humphries

Before every show, Tim Humphrey fingers through his crate of PlayStation 2 games and plugs in a favourite. His good friend Brad comes over, and their discussion alternates between the logistics of the evening's show and video game trash talk.

As the producer of the infamous Lulu LaRude's Five Minutes of Fame, Timmy needs this relaxation time. In a few short hours, he will be responsible for finding five judges, setting up the set, selecting and organizing the music, making the announcements, fixing microphones and sound problems, and then stripping down the set at the end of the show. Toughest of all, Timmy is responsible for gathering the show's contestants, which often requires extensive pleading and begging.

The strange thing about Timmy is that you'd never believe that he is the gay producer of Halifax's premier drag queen talent show. He's just too... ordinary. Messy brown hair darts in all directions from underneath his red baseball cap. In a loose t-shirt and jeans, he looks ready for a six-pack of Keith's and a hockey game. In reality, he's sifting through music files, picking songs for the show.

After growing up in Saint John, NB, Timmy found his way to Halifax to work for an animation studio. The 30-year-old is a talented artist, and framed portraits—cartoon caricatures of elegant women smoking cigarettes—adorn the wall of his apartment. It wasn't until he was 23 that Timmy came out of the closet to his mom, with whom he is extremely close. Her gut reaction to the news confused him.

"You don't dress up like a woman, do you?" she asked immediately.

"Oh, my God, no! That's not what it's about!" Timmy couldn't grasp the generalization.

Timmy knew Lulu LaRude by reputation long before they met. The duo soon participated together at a stand-up comedy fundraiser for Gay Pride. Lulu was impressed by the young man's quick wit and ability to think on his feet. When the original producer of 5MoF left, Timmy took over.

According to drag queen Rouge Fatale, Timmy took the show to another level. He was the "good cop" to Lulu LaRude's fiery bad cop. When Lulu, always the perfectionist, would fume about a hiccup in the show, Timmy would remind her that it wasn't so bad.

"What do you mean, it's not so bad?!" she would bark back, to the delight of the audience.

She got over it. She always got over it. Lulu left it all on stage—she was just playing the bad-cop. For the good cop, life was good. Looking back, it was too good to be true.

It started with a bad headache.

On its own, obviously, this would never stop Lulu LaRude from performing. But a few weeks of bad headaches later, when Lulu started losing sight in her left eye, she figured it was time for the doctors to take a look. They said she was suffering from Trigeminal Neuralgia, a neuropathic disease that causes intense pain throughout the face. In the days before appropriate treatment was available, they called it "the suicide disease," since most sufferers would kill themselves rather than live with the pain.

Since treatment was available, and since Lulu LaRude had the strength of five men (or slightly more), the news wasn't too drastic... if the doctors were right.

They weren't. Lulu had a brain tumour.

Sometimes, true character reveals itself in life's strangest and saddest moments. Facing death, Lulu LaRude's endless optimism sparkled. Empty morphine bottles crowded her bedside table; the doctors had her on 360mg of time-release capsules per day. She never once complained about the pain. The chemo zapped her hair off, so she raved about how snugly her wigs fit and how easy it was to draw her eyebrows on.

The cancerous lesion above her sinuses rested on her optic nerve, and soon she lost all vision in her left eye. She held a contest to see who could make her the most fabulous eye patch. Of course, they were all winners, and she performed wearing them interchangeably.

Within days of the diagnosis, the drag community organized a fundraiser to help Lulu with the financial burden of her illness. She chose Eureka Love, who'd once stood in for her and was now herself a budding drag queen, as the host. Although it was a terrific honour, Eureka can barely remember the night—it was a total blur of emotion.

Eureka also took over as the temporary host of Five Minutes of Fame when Lulu was too ill to make it. Without fail, Eureka would give Lulu the hosting fees.

More bad news. Chemotherapy had slowed the tumour, but not stopped it. The doctors told Lulu LaRude she had two months to live.

"Well, what am I going to do, sit around and bitch about it?" she quipped.

That night, Lulu invited Eureka and a handful of other queens to her home. They played Clue for hours and Lulu made them laugh. From the beginning of her illness, no one believed Queen Lulu—the unstoppable force—could ever succumb. The tumour should bow to her!

That night, Lulu sat up in her bed with Eureka Love at her side, and she asked her friend for a favour.

"Take the show," said Lulu.

Chef's Corner

Now that the summer weather is upon us, after a long day at the beach, or enjoying a hike through any of the numerous nature areas of our beautiful region, make a point to stop by the lobster pound and pick up our region's most treasured crustacean, the noble Atlantic lobster. I prefer to buy live and cook them myself, but the whole point of this article is to make an easy preparation for you, so buy them cooked. While on your travels, pick up your produce at one of the many farmers markets. Local wild asparagus should still be available, as well as baby red potatoes and fresh herbs. If you happen to be near one of our region's vineyards, pick up a bottle of what are becoming better and better locally-produced wines, and your evening is set for a great meal on the patio or balcony. Happy chillin'!

Chilled Poached Lobster with Grilled Asparagus and Baby Red Potato Salad

Ingredients for 2 plates

- | | |
|---|---------------------------------|
| 2 (1 1/2 lb) female lobsters (for the coral) | 2 tbsp chopped chives |
| 1 lb baby red potatoes | 1 cup sour cream |
| 1 lb asparagus spears (tossed in olive oil to coat only) | 2 tbsp tarragon vinegar |
| 1 shallot (minced) | juice of 1 lemon |
| 1 clove garlic (crushed) | 1 tsp sugar |
| 2 tbsp chopped fresh lovage (or flat leaf parsley and tarragon) | 1/2 salt |
| | 1 tsp cracked pink peppercorns |
| | 1/2 lb whole butter (clarified) |

Method

1. Start by boiling the quartered baby red potatoes in salted water until fork-tender. Drain and while still hot toss in a bowl with the tarragon vinegar, sugar, salt and pepper. Place covered in the refrigerator until fully chilled.

2. During this time, combine the sour cream, lemon juice, shallot, garlic and herbs and set aside.

3. While the potatoes are still cooling, cook the asparagus on your outdoor grill on a medium-high heat, just to give them a bit of charring for flavour and until they are just cooked through (approx. 3-4 min).

4. When potatoes are cold, toss them with the sour cream dressing and cut up grilled asparagus.

I like to serve this meal on large oval dinner plates with the lobsters cut in half and the claws pre-cracked for easier, less messy eating, placed on either end of the plate and a mound of the salad in the center, garnished with the crumbled red lobster coral and a lemon wedge for those who like extra. Serve your clarified hot butter in a ceramic candle-warmed chaffing dish for dipping the lobster in. There you have it, the perfect Maritimes summer dinner!

20 YRS PRD 08: License to ... A Pride Wish

A summer afternoon under a blue blue sky, my eyes are following a bright red balloon as it floats up and over the city's hub-bub and drifts away ... away ... away – a peaceful image of serenity and calm in a day filled with riotous joyful sounds and a constantly shifting panorama of crowds and colours. That's one of my earliest and most cherished Pride memories. It was in Toronto about 20 years ago and I was marching in my first Pride Parade. Ever so slowly, through my late 20s, I'd come closer to being comfortable with my queer identity. I'd begun working at Glad Day Bookshop, the LGBT bookstore on Yonge Street. I'd been going to Pride Day for a couple of years but I hadn't done the parade, I'd just hit the bars and revelled in the crowds of smiling, shirtless men – all remarkably attitude-free I noticed - with the promise of a frolic after the sun went down. I looked down on the parade, in fact I rather looked down on the whole "gay" thing – after all I was a serious artist, my identity, my essence – my sense of self – could hardly be contained by so narrow a word as "gay," that was just about who I had sex with. I don't know how it happened (maybe I just got bored with my own pomposity!) but that year I finally ended up on the corner of Yonge and Wood Streets watching the whole amazing spectacle go by. Toronto's Pride was still a manageable crowd back then and most floats were community based constructions, making up with wit and ingenuity what they lacked in budgets. Suddenly the Buddies in Bad Times Theatre float sailed into view, with Sky Gilbert feigning suitably decadent ennui as he was languidly flogged by some nubile drag queens and leather boys. Those were my friends and colleagues on that float! Even more of my friends were tagging along behind and everyone was dancing to the most fabulous medley of über-queer music – "Rise up, rise up!" sang the Parachute Club and I couldn't resist. I slipped the surly bonds of convention and slid off the curb into the moving throng; we sang and danced our way up Yonge Street. The sidewalks were filled with spectators – some so obviously not queer. They were all smiling too and seemed genuinely caught up in the vibe. No judgement, no ridicule, no hate. I started to get it – I felt I was becoming "Proud." The layers of shame I'd wrapped around myself were evaporating in the music and sunshine. I began to feel like I was participating in one of those ancient pagan or mediaeval festivals, a Saturnalia or a Feast of Fools, when society reversed its usual order and – for one day - the despised and rejected of the world were suddenly exalted and celebrated. I was overwhelmed at the deepest level by a sense of communion with my fellow revellers and basking in the warmth and support from the crowd – and that's when I saw the balloon. I didn't stop dancing, but I followed it closely with my eyes as it floated up between the towers at Yonge and Bloor. It seemed to be floating to heaven and I was floating along with it – at least as far as a dancing mortal man could go.

Twenty years of Pride in Halifax. Twenty years and more - of struggle and sacrifice to pay tribute to, twenty years and more - of advances and accomplishments to honour. Twenty years and more of history to carry us into the future. We have changed the world! My wish for all of us in Pride Week 2008 - as a community and as individuals - is that 20 YRS PRD 08 is more than just a license to celebrate, that it becomes for all of us a LICENSE TO SOAR.

Dykes on Bikes A Pride Wish

Halifax was the first Pride I attended after coming out in the late '90's, and the beginning of a love affair for me. It's that sense of community and gathering of friends, with a good old kitchen party welcome that makes Halifax Pride so special. Still there's one aspect of that BIG city Pride that I miss. That small but meaningful gap is the lack of a Dykes on Bikes contingent in our Parade. I don't mean the pedal powered type either. I mean sexy leather clad women on even sexier pieces of machinery. Dykes on Bikes started in San Francisco in 1976 and it's been a favorite at Pride Parades ever since. Looking back over our own '20 Years Proud' in Halifax, I think it's fitting that we include such an important piece of our cultural history into our Pride Parade. I'd like to invite all those women who own or can access a motorcycle to come down on July 26th and rev up our 20th Anniversary Pride Parade.

LICENSE TO CELEBRATE!

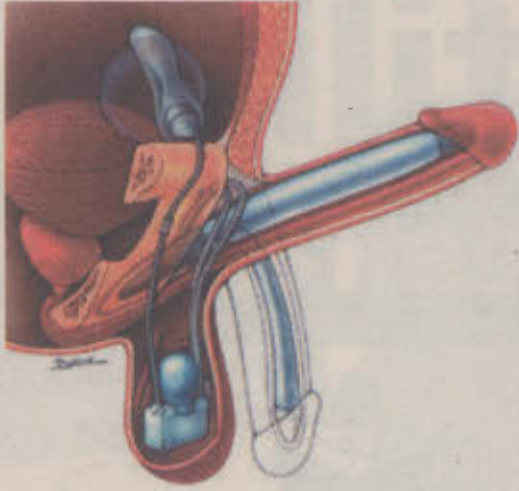

Getting It Up After Surgery

By JC

I was always a little smug about my health history. For most of my life I checked almost all the NO boxes on medical questionnaires. Then one day, after a routine digital exam, I was told I might have a prostate problem. PSA levels had always been normal. A biopsy confirmed it was cancer. Given my age and other circumstances, my urologist recommended surgery, a radical prostatectomy. And so it was done. The good news is that, after analysis, I have a good prognosis. The bad news was that, in my case, it was decided not to use so called "nerve sparing technique," which meant I would be irretrievably impotent. An orgasm was possible but an erection, impossible without help. If I'd been single, this might not have mattered so much but I was in a new relationship, so it did matter. We tried to be brave but it turned out to be problematic for our relationship. What to do?

There are several things you can do to achieve a post surgery erection. Each person has to decide for themselves what is appropriate for them. There is plenty of information on the web and forums to discuss alternatives with others who have been through this. I tried the injection method but I'm allergic to the formula available locally. The pump was awkward and unsatisfactory for us. Two years after surgery, I finally chose a three-piece, inflatable, penile prosthesis. What was installed was an "AMS 700 Ultrex." It consists of a pair of inflatable plastic cylinders that are placed in the penis, a pump and valve assembly located in the scrotum, a fluid reservoir located in the abdominal cavity and plastic tubing linking all the components. To inflate, you squeeze the grape sized plastic bulb located between the testicles with your fingers. It takes a little manual dexterity - see the diagrams. About six weeks after surgery you are ready to go. It takes a little getting used to but I have to say it has worked well for us. My surgeon says that his patents generally inflate their prostheses to about 80-85% capacity. Surveys say that it is the most satisfactory solution for ID in terms of patient and partner satisfaction. (92% for men, 96% for their partners.) Not bad!

I am not aware of the reservoir in my abdomen. I am unaware of the presence of the rest of my prosthesis, most of the time. My penis is a little larger and harder than before in the deflated condition and, a little shorter than before, in the inflated condition. However, it's harder than it ever was during a normal erection. Furthermore, you can keep it inflated as long as you want which has obvious advantages. The orgasm is different, with less throbbing, but still pleasant. There is, of course, because of the surgery, no ejaculation. I think that may explain why I feel less enervated after an orgasm.

This implant isn't cheap (mine was $4,300) though the surgery is covered and it carries a life-time warranty. There is a cheaper alternative, a non-inflatable type which you just bend up when you need it and bend down when you don't.

I don't regret my decision to do this. A lot of men feel that if they had to do it again, they would. I feel more or less "complete" again, a participant in life instead of an observer who can "look but not touch." So, if you are concerned about the consequences of prostatectomy, there is a light at the end of the tunnel!

Gay by Design

By Amore Passion

Welcome to the first article of Gay by Design, "straight" from La Terrasse Amore Passion. We are pleased to be your host to a world that even though we are a part of, we often simply see it from afar or from a brief visit, possibly never fully understanding or appreciating. In Gay by Design we will discuss art, culture, food, wine, and even romance—when we understand and use this knowledge, we can take more pleasure in the loves and passions in our lives. We'll start off by discussing lobster, an all time favourite summer food.

Enjoying lobster in a restaurant requires some knowledge and etiquette to ensure that you not only enjoy what has been prepared for you, but also not to offend those who are dining with you. Do not feel intimidated if it is your first time eating a whole lobster in a restaurant. Eating a lobster will require you to follow some easy steps and guidelines, which will perhaps also save you from the embarrassment of destroying your lobster.

1. Holding the lobster by the back, slowly pull off the legs in a twisting motion. Although the legs are small and tricky to remove, they do have meat inside.

2. With a gentle twisting motion, remove the claws at the joints. You may also want to use the nutcracker to do this if the claws resist the gentle pull.

3. Remove the loose part of the claw and consume the meat inside.

4. The large section of the claw will require the use of a nutcracker. Simply crack down on the claw and take your small seafood fork and gently press the meat from the tip of the claw out the larger end of the claw.

5. Twist the tail and the back breaking them off into two separate sections.

6. Consuming the tail does require some care and practice since this section provides the best meat.

Remove the small flippers (also known as the telsons) and insert your finger into the telson end. Slowly force the meat out through the large opening that was once connected to the back. The meat located within the flippers is edible and quite delicious.

7. It is important to remove the black vein from the top of the tail and can be done by simply peeling off the top of the tail and pulling out the vein. Many people consume the tomalley, the lobster's liver and digestive tract, which will appear green, but it is not recommended since this is where pollution may linger.

8. You may eat the remaining meat that is located within the body of the lobster, but you may encounter some mysterious organs. The gills and circulation system are edible, as well as the roe. Roe, or coral, are the unfertilized eggs that are in the body of a female lobster and are consumed by true lobster lovers.

9. Some restaurants provide a plastic bib, a napkin is more appropriate to use, as long as it is a cloth napkin and not made of paper.

10. If you do not want to be troubled with the removal of the meat you should request the shell to be removed when you are placing the order with the server. Do not wait until your entrée is delivered to your table to make this request. The kitchen will also appreciate the request when the order arrives to the kitchen and not as an afterthought.

ALL Aboard!

Adrian, Owner of Spree
 • Hey, Adrian, any plans yet for Pride? Plans? Not yet. If I'm not working, then I'll go to the parade. • What about when the sun goes down? Well, we talked about having a party here at Spree. • Remember your first Pride, Adrian? [Laughs] Yeah, most of it! [My turn to laugh!] It was in T.O. - I got wasted, it was hilarious! • What did you wear? I wore a sarong as a top, and knotted in this weird, crazy, random way. [JUST LIKE our people, give them a yard of fabric and they'll find a "thousand" ways to wear it!] • What about pants? Er, I don't remember - I may have left them on the parade route [Oh, I just HATE it when that happens!]

Baby Max, Future Star
 • Plans for Pride, Dude? The parade, then Jay's Garden Party. [Well, duh, what was I thinking?] • What are you going to wear? A smartly tailored Pampers suit with a smarter bib. • Which after-party is on your To Poo list? Just Depends on how much Pampering I get! [Insert tongue in cheek, not!] • Do you remember your first Pride? • Sorta, but it was all a bit of a blur, and I couldn't quite hear through all the amniotic fluid!

Tracey Curry, Manager of D2
 • I know you have plans for Pride, Tracey. Spill 'em! Of course, I'll be dancin' in the parade, suckin' on Jello shooters. [make enough for TWO, cause I think I just made MY plans!] • Set plans yet for the parties? No, I'm just gonna let the underwire of my bra lead the way [I'm "sooo" hanging with you!] • Do you remember your first Pride? Hell, yeah! It was 1990 in Vancouver. I wore a bustier with eyeballs that blinked on my boobs; needless to say, I've never had so many comments on my eyes! ["No Doubt!!" - See pic!]

Terry and Eryn, of Eye Level Gallery
 • So, Eryn, what are your Pride plans? Well, I think I may just go with the flow. • Oh, come on, Eryn, that's a lie! What are you really doin'? Okay, don't tell anyone, but I'm gonna get a bicycle-driven hot tub with fireworks! Sweet! No problem, my lips are sealed [but I can't speak for my pen - it can't seem to keep a secret!] • What are you going to wear? A bright orange bikini and knee highs! • Do you remember your first Pride? Montreal - Ohhh, the "French"! • And you, Terry, with-an-i-when-you're-feelin'-it, what are your plans? Oh, I'll be in the hot tub! [rub-a-dub-dub, HOTTIES in the tub!] • What are you going to wear? I was thinking I might wear my Chewbacca suit. [the BEARS will love that! I hope said hot tub has a HARDCORE filter, LOL!] • First Pride, Terry? Uh, I can't remember. [just the way I like 'em: ARTSY with NO long-term memory!]

Sorry, darlings, if that seems a teensy bit harsh, but it does set the tone! So do read on, if you dare to be entertained. By the way, this is the premiere column of ALL Aboard, where (with your help) we will build momentum for an ultimate train of thought, where there are multiple tracks with one goal of leaving nobody behind - whoever you are, jump on, you are welcome! Next stop: You decide!

This stop: Pride!

Jay Wells, stylist, with Alexander, Baby Max's Dad
 • Your plans, Jay? To rewrite 'Valley of the Dolls' [Girl, it's already out on video!] Oh, you mean for Pride! • What are you going to wear? Well, something 20-ish draped around my neck, and I haven't decided yet on my bottom, but I'm currently taking applications. • What about the parties? Of course, it's a WEEK, after all!

20th Annual Courage Round Up

The 20th annual Courage Round Up will be held from August 8 through 10, 2008 at the Universalist Unitarian Church, 5500 Inglis St., in Halifax, Nova Scotia. The theme for this year's Round Up is "Sailing into Sobriety." Courage is a small, intimate Round Up, sponsored by gay men and lesbians in

AA. It is the only gay and lesbian Round Up in Atlantic Canada, and the only one of its kind east of Montreal.

Open to all alcoholics and those affected by the alcoholism of others. The weekend includes fellowship, speaker meetings and workshop discussions of recovery topics in a relaxed and peaceful setting.

Registration opens at 5:00pm on Friday, August 8. Cost is $25.00, which includes lunch on Saturday. However, no one will be turned away for lack of funds. Supper on Saturday is extra, estimated at $12.00, to be paid at the restaurant.

Pre-registration is appreciated. Send your cheque or money order to Courage Round Up, c/o 1916 - 1333 South Park St., Halifax, NS, B3J 2K9.

For more information, call (902) 425-8383, e-mail Courage449@yahoo.com, or visit the website at www.rationalunlucy.com/courageroundup.

Last Month's Question

Can we keep Pride alive all year long? 32 people responded; 21 thought we could, 3 thought we couldn't, and 6 weren't sure. We got some wonderful tips on doing it: • By living your life openly and proudly to all. • Have monthly or weekly events. • By organizing workshops for both our community and the straight community. • By having representatives on various boards and groups, like the Chamber of Commerce and Destination Halifax, to elevate pride into the boardrooms and every other aspect of Nova Scotian life. • By being out, proud LGBT men and women every day of the year.

This month's question:

Are you a city, town, or rural (country) dweller? Are you closeted, selectively out, or totally out about your sexual orientation? Is Pride relevant to you as a form of social activism, of actively socializing, both, or neither?

OUT! Alive – Is It For You?

By Angus Campbell

OUT! Alive is an alliance of citizens who are concerned about drug, alcohol, tobacco, and gambling issues within the GLBT Community in the Halifax Regional Municipality. The committee is open to all within the Rainbow Community and our allies.

Studies have shown that members of our community use drugs, alcohol and tobacco more frequently than our straight counterparts. OUT! Alive's mission is to increase knowledge of addiction and dependency issues by promoting outreach and understanding; to raise awareness about the treatment and support available; and to ensure that such options are able to meet, respect and respond to the needs and experiences of those within the Rainbow Community.

OUT! Alive is guided by the principles of harm reduction which state that knowledge empowers individuals, and with new learning comes freedom and healthier choices. There is no judgment, only respect, encouragement and support.

In March OUT! Alive launched a smoking reduction program with an information session at Venus Envy. In addition to data specific to GLBT smokers (yes, we are a target demographic), participants were offered free nicotine patches, gum, counseling and support. Plans are to offer the program again in the fall.

"Come meet our friendly faces on the Common after the Pride parade. Better yet, join and help raise awareness in the Rainbow Community about drugs, alcohol, tobacco and gambling," says chair Patrick Daigle. Volunteers meet once a month to plan community awareness and education activities.

Al Pineau

The queer community mourns the passing of a good friend, mentor and stalwart supporter. Joseph Alan Pineau passed away Thursday, May 22, 2008, at his home in Rustico, PEI, aged 52 years. He had recently entered the hospital suffering from pneumonia.

He is survived by his mother, Theresa Gauthier and brothers and sister, Wendell (Sherril), Cornwall; Barry (Janet), St Patrick's; Donald, Calgary; Melinda (Allan) Peters, Rustico and Stephen (Corrie), Mount Stewart. He is also survived by numerous aunts, uncles, nieces and nephews. Alan will be remembered by his special "biking" friends. He was predeceased by his father, Alphonse; step-mother Patricia Treadway and Lucille (Gran) Tread.

Many of the gay community knew Al through Pineau's Cafe which he operated for many years on Blowers Street in Halifax. Lots of restaurants provide good food and service but Al offered a personal touch that made any occasion a special one. Customers were treated not as patrons but as friends. "Al was a great cook and the restaurant was one of my favourite spots to relax, but it will always be his unconditional acceptance of me that I will remember," says Denise. Another regular remembers Al's humour and style. "When Al saw that you were there with a gay friend, he would prance out of the kitchen and turn up the camp! And then, you could be in the next day with a client, you would get businesslike, formal service."

Al was a big supporter of the LGBT community, never turning down a request for sponsorship, often in the form of mountains of food for innumerable Pride events, sending out his own staff to make sure the presentation was perfect. Donations in Alan's memory can be made to the Dialysis Unit of Beach Grove Home. For those who knew and loved Al, and for those who only wished they had, perhaps the best tribute we can give him would be to continue his habit of performing acts of kindness. The best kind of legacy and one of which Al would surely approve..

not discriminate." We see through that. If requests to fly the Pride flag had not been made, the flag policy would not have been changed.

Now is the time to protest these decisions. The only way to do this is to make a stand. Complacency is something we cannot afford.

It's time take a strong stand and show determination so we may, in one determined voice, denounce discrimination. It is a daunting task, but it is achievable. We must unite, so that all communities in Nova Scotia are free to celebrate Pride week and hoist the Pride flag.

This year marks the first year for Amherst to host Pride week, to be held during the week of July 7 to 13. We appreciate the support from the town of Amherst, and we have to make certain all communities in this province will experience this wonderful opportunity to celebrate our proper place in whatever town or county we live.

Join in our effort to have the Pride flag hoisted in every community across Nova Scotia. It is important we speak with one voice, to bring this problem to a successful conclusion, when all Nova Scotians can celebrate by flying flags, no matter what a particular flag may represent.

Queer Womyn's Murder Mystery Theatre

by Bernadine

For almost a decade now, a group of glbt womyn in the Halifax area have been putting together a popular and very fun murder mystery theatre evening/party at Halloween. Some years the event has been large and open to the general queer community as a fundraiser, while other years it has been a smaller, private event.

The mystery theatre portion of the event is an original play custom-written for a queer audience and is full of hilarity and sexual innuendo. Even though four of the eight roles are usually male, it is performed by an all-female cast.

Each year is a different theme. In "Frought With the Sin," Brother Swagart kept a close eye on Retch Hustler and Harlet O'Scara. In "Disturbing the Dead," Dr. Crok Ashytt and his archeological team unearthed some very dark secrets.

This year's production is called "Your Bleedin' Heart," which is about the country music industry. It will feature performances by Polly Phartin, Ann Murkey, Katie Twang, Wymoana Juggs, Twitchy Hick, Darc Broods and Sonny Stash. Devoted fans will be pleased to know that their favourite makeup stylist Frankford Flamer will return this year.

There is an opening for a role this year. No previous acting experience is necessary. If you like to ham it up and have fun, you'll fit right in. This is an amateur production, and the emphasis is on having FUN. If you'd like to join us either as an actress or to help out in this year's production, please email moidah@eastlink.ca or check out our website at www.geocities.com/moidah.
