COUNCIL, CALDWELL EXPLAIN STAND ON YEARBOOK COMMITTEES REPORT

In Charge of 1949-'50 Pharos-Work on the new year book is progressing well, under the direction of Miss Carol Wood, above. Carol is a fourth year Arts student, and has played a prominent part in campus activities of all sorts. She is a member of the Students' Council; was President of the Pi Beta Phi Sorority during the past year, and even finds time to play on the girls' hockey team.

Session of Mock Parliament Ends With Overthrow of the Government

The Liberal Government of the Dalhousie Mock Parliament was voted out of office by a large majority in a Vote of Want of Confidence by the combined opposition.

First on the agenda was a matter of national importance and great urgency, introduced by the Resignation of Varsity Maritime Rights Party Ian Robertson, slightly jarred by the fact that the speech he was about to make had just been handed to him, made a most convoncing appeal to the House that Cape Breton should be made into a national shrine immediately, for reasons beyond this writer's comprehension.

Smith in reply, said that at 65 a man is still too young to need assistance George Illsley, Lloyd Caldwell and Joe MacIntyre also spoke against the bill, while the CCF Party supported it. The Hon, member from Bona Vista, Twillingsgate, Mr. Ron Downie said the bill should not be passed as it would undoubtedly break the hearts of his old fishermen constituents. A meeting of the Arts and Science Society was held last Tuesday in Room Three of the Arts Building for the purpose of nominating candidates for next year's Council and for Campus Queen. After the minutes of the previous meeting were read a brief financial report of the Society was given.

Sherman Zwicker received the nomination for President of the Students Council; Andy MacKay was named as his running mate for Vice-President. The sum of $35 was voted for campaign funds.

The following nominations were also made: For Senior Boy-Noel Goodridge, Peter Doig; For Senior Girl - Sally Newman, Gretchen Frazer; For Junior Boy-Ian Mac-Culloch, Tupper Porter; For Junagain be the outstanding feature ior Girl-Jerry Grant, Foo Grant; Robin MacNeil, Red Findlay.

the telegrams quoted in the appendix to the report, and that the amount of advertising copy purported to be in the printer's hands by the end of August was overstated.

He also said that, at the same time, when it appeared that pages 1-93 of the issue were missing, pages 1-64 had in fact been in the printer's hands for a month, but had been misplaced and forgotten in the owner's absence.

Mr. Caldwell admitted that he had misrepresented the state of the book continually from the time of Mr. Moreira's first contact with him, up to and including the time of the students forum held at the end of the first term. But, he said, these misrepresentations had been made for personal reasons, which the Council had not taken into account in its condemnation of his actions. The condemnation was made in a recommendation advanced by a Council Committee, appointed to investigate the issue's lateness, and apportion blame for it. The report placed full responsibility with Mr. Caldwell, and was accepted at the last meeting of the Council.

Mr. Milne, a member of that Council Committee, then pointed out that Mr. Caldwell had refused help to hurry the completion of the book, and, with that in mind, his reasons for misrepresentation made no difference.

Mr. Caldwell considered that his case should nevertheless have been given more consideration, and that the Council Committee was composed of people who would not do so. He asked the Committee how much time had been spent in drafting its recommendation, and was told that they had spent half an hour, in addition to time spent at most of the year's Council meetings. This committee was appoint-

BLAME-PLACING

Re-Write Lucy Calp

In a letter reprinted below, the Council of Students makes known its attitude concerning the responsibility for the lateness of the 1948-'49 Pharos.

The first paragraph of the resolution places the blame wholly on the Editor. The second ends with the statement that the Council "extended its confidence to him to an extent which appeared at the time to be reasonable". The two are hardly compatible. In the latter statement, the Council infers that it, too, took steps which were not best. With that in mind, the Council should not, in all conscience, overlook its liability in the Hindsight is, of course, a wonderful faculty which can be used to prove the most unlikely assertions.

But there is in law a doctrine known as contributory negligence, which allows courts to split the responsibility for an incident. We do not wish to prove the Council entirely responsible . . . we wish merely to ask that they accept the blame for as much of the year book's lateness as their "apparent" reason caused.

The Editor-in-Chief, Dalhousie Gazette,

At a meeting held last night the Council approved the report of the Yearbook Enquiry Committee. The report is as follows:-

" Having reviewed the events connected with the 1948-49 edition of the Yearbook while under the jurisdiction of this Council, the Committee has concluded that the blame for the lateness of the book rests on the shoulders of the Editor.

"The Committee has further concluded that this Council, although it appeared to allow the Editor to continue too long in his position, extended its confidence to him to an extent which appeared at the time to be reason-

I did tell Dog that he should receive this nomination, for he was extremely digilent in preserving the dignity of Parliament and foiling those who attempted to make light of it. He did scoff at the idea of running for Prime Minister but did say wistfully that he would like to sit again in his old seat in Parliament. I did assure him he would be returned with a smacking majority, whereupon he did smile and mutter something about the Spectator.

was about twenty then and her hair was black like the night and days in bondage but in security. her eyes as green as leaves just washed by rain. That was 1946. I was with A.J. in Montreal when he met her. I remember those singularly careless days: I watched the love affair flower and bloom; I saw the shadows fall over it slowly but irrevocably; I came with them back to Halifax and was through it all with them, right up to the horrible revelation of her past and the pathetic conclusion that followed.

You see, she was married to Ekstien and there was a child. But pathize. I recall her tears, and we did not know this then. I only love and that things had to run for war. I didn't ask for the caltheir natural course. The marriage explained why she was continually going back and forth to Montreal. Of course Ekstien adored her, he must have, for he knew of A.J. and yet kept financing her trips. She said to me once: "I can't stand him, Sam. He's too weak in his love. I admire strength". But these domestic troubles were only incidental.

A.J. soon saw the impossibility of the situation. Love became pity and he knew her trouble was deep, that in her soul there was the evil gnawing of a dark past. And I remember well the night she told us all.

It was one September evening after we had known her a year. She told us how Ekstien had found her. It was 1945-in Europe-in a prison camp. She was a Spanish prisoner when the Army detail came into the camp. Ekstien noticed her at once for she was well dressed and well fed, a marked dif- her bleeding lips and they say she ference from the other prisoners. It was a simple explanation: a

And she was haunted by many an evil memory: good and evil warred within her and she fought bravely for the higher life -but she had been too deeply mired in the mud. Yet we cannot judge her. We can only sym-A.J.'s stony silence: "Am I to knew A.J. and Catanna were in blame?" she cried. "I didn't ask nails! ousness of war."

Finally A.J. forced her to go back to Ekstien. It was the only answer. She wept and said she didn't know how to take serenity or the good things of life. It was pathetic; but she went.

But then one day in November a life that had known only violence ended in violence. As Ekstien said to us: "She had no heart. I guess she was just mixed up inside.'

About the violence. She left Ekstien for a drive one afternoon. She kissed him goodbye and he thought it meant she was going to try to love him. But her drive was a one way affair. She rolled the car over a steep embankment and it came to rest as a ball of twisted steel. They found her in the wreck, glass in her lungs, looking with sightless askance at the uncomprehending sky. She wore a defiant and supercilious smile on was like a lovely rose wilting its life away.

Politics at the ISS Seminar

When a large number of students from various countries gather together, a very natural subject of discussion is politics and political philosophy. The second annual ISS Seminar in Holland last summer was no exception. The diversity of political backgrounds made these discussions all the more interest-

The Canadian group was the most conservative group at the seminar and the only major group to stand for private enterprise. Although there was a sprinkling of "radical" CCF supporters, the majority of the Canadians tended to the Liberal or the Conservative points of view. The British group included both Tories and Socialists. On the whole, students from Continental countries were socialists; the Scandinavian group was the most solidly socialist block. The Germans and Italians, with their background of militant nationalism, were concerned mainly with understanding the new conception of a democratic framework within which either the socialist or the free enterprise system could work.

The question of communism naturally occupied an important position in the discussions. Since there were no communists present to defend the communist doctrine, the discussions centered around how to prevent the spread of comnunism. Dean de Konick of Lava refuted the communist philosophy, and it was generally accepted at the seminar that communism was not a practicable system for the West. Perhaps one of the most controversial proposals for stopping the westward expansion of communism was European Union. Although this proposal was favourably received by all the Continental students, albeit with some slight misgivings, the British students. Tories as well as Socialists. objected strenuously to the proposal as being very disadvantageous to Britain; it might be noted that the Tories objected notwithstanding the fact that their leader, Mr. Churchill, is at present the most prominent backer of European Union. Due to the fact that the seminar was held in Holland, considerable attention was paid to a practical experiment at present being carried out in European Union. The object of Benelux is complete economic union, to be achieved by degrees in a year or so. The Dutch admitted that they were encountering many difficulties, but they were quite confident that ultimately they would achieve their goal. It is to be hoped that this spirit will prevail throughout Western Europe to form a European Union in time to be an effective of communism.

Manager Charlie MacIntosh for the MRP stated their unanimous approval of the Bill, which was then passednot without opposition.

The House quieted as Weldon Mathews, leader of the PC Party rose and made a motion that a vote of non-confidence in the government be given. The Opposition looked very smug-they knew they had a majority in the House. The Government expecting as much, didn't look very interested. Windy O'Neil and Art Moreira discoursed on the vices of the Government very lengthily. However, the House was far more interested in what Mr. Moreira was dangling in the air while speaking. Apparently it was an old heirloom of great value to him-a bottle opener and a feather on a chain. Bob Grant also spoke on the motion and then a vote was taken. The Government was defeated by a vote of 50 to 32.

In conclusion Doug Robertson spoke a few very well chosen words in saying that this had been the best attended and most enthusiastic Mock Parliament in many years. He went on to thank Mr. Fraser for having given so much of his time and ability in being with us. And for once the Liberals and the PC's were in complete accord, as W. Mathews reiterated the sentiments of Mr. Robertson. Rod Chisholm, leader Batt, clerk of the House for the sincere and noisy applause.

MONTREAL - (CUP) - "Too many universities are nothing but an uneasy no-man's-land between the oposing citadels of two rival ideologies," Dr. C. Nevertheless, the league offers a fair display of ball and comes across with its shar eof comic antics.

Last Saturday, basketball fans were treated to a triple-header of ball (analagous to three fingers of scotch). The opening game featured the Dal girls team against the St. F.X. feminine entry. For girls' ball it was quite well played; so well that I was inspired to write it up in the chummy manner of our local sportscribe. The second game developed as expected and Dal trounced the Acadia team by a convincing margin. That news however is week old but the officiating has lingered on and has necessitated comment. Every year the M.I.A.U. assigns to each intercollegiate basketball game two referees. These designated officials must be therefore fairly competent to rate such undertakings BUT the actionary decrees of the officials in the Dal-Acadia game provoked much dissatisfaction and left much to be desired. And further more the comic tendency of one of the two to dominate the court took much away from the even progress a game should be played. I'D suggest that he become a traffic cop as he should easily meet the prerequisites with his wild and comic gesticulations-he could direct pedestrians with his larms, the cars with his legs and the cyclists with his mobile tongue.

The third game of the program featured the Dal juniors against the Q.E.H. battalion. A second attempt to gain entry into the girls' dressing room forced me to miss this game and that attempt was again in vain. (Come Mr. Pottie, let me in on the secrets of the trade.)

Next week end the cathedral town of Antigonish will be under invasion from four possible Dal attacking units. The Dal varsity hockey and basketball teams will be journeying to do battle and there is the possibility of the junior team and the girls' team making the trip. The spotlight however will be on the varsity ball game and a large excursion of Dal partisans is expected to mature although the proposed plans are yet embryonic.

It is no great secret that the valley town lost a lot of money the past two seasons. They were much weaker than the other clubs in the circuit and consequently drew smaller crowds all over. One had to admire their tenacity though. They kept trying".-The above quotation poses a few problems. What did they draw the crowds over; and who was tenacity? their ultility outfielder or the spirit of the small crowds; and who kept trying? the team or the small

Also outstanding in solo roles were Ronald Beare, as Frederick the pirate apprentice and Richard Miller as Major-General Stanley. Ishbel Campbell gave a splendid performance as Mabel, although her voice was rather weak in some places. Ann Thexton who has appeared in many Gilbert and Sullivan operettas, turned in her usual dependable performance.

Credit for the general excellence of the Pirates is due to Professor Hamer's untiring efforts and the improvement in the orchestra in particular was one of the most pleasant surprises of the evening.
