As a child, it was instilled into me with my first cups of tea that British was best. ~~At~~

At school, ~~we~~ we sang lustily the "Heart of Oak were our ships and Jolly Tars were our men" &
"Rule Britannia".

Other learning establishments celebrated May Day, but we, very properly danced round ^{(that shallie symbol of the 19th} a maypole, and paraded for Empire Day.
The war came at a
sensitive time in my development. The Germans conquered Europe. One of our armies was ~~captured~~ imprisoned in the Far East. We were kicked for 6 in the middle East & men out of France.

But ^{the remaining} ~~the~~ ^{paid off} ~~lay~~ in our air raid chertis ^{night afterwards} drinking tea and impervious to the
min. We still believed Birtok was best & were not a bit surprised
when the war was won.
- I couldn't explain ^{all} that to the man in the drugstore.
~~I tried~~ and I didn't even
say. I just told him I was travelling on a foreign ship and that I mustn't be seasick.

"This is good weather for you"
I said

"It's terrible. Who wants their like this?"

Outside, a thin drizzle spattered the puddles

"You from near by?" he asked
"No, from Canada."

I know your writers
Walt Whitman, Thoreau,
and those. I'm a great
reader of philosophy.

He stood there with his

hanging down, knotted
muffler & cracked grimy

his beer glass. And he quoted Marcus

to see what he could arrange. Do you

remember what she
said to him?"

"No"

"You're building your

Then he quoted Oscar Wilde, once he had heard a Christmas

quiz. - "What had Doucin gray, "The Vicar of Wakefield" and ~~Rapshodass~~ (?) (a play by ^{Dr.} Johnson?) got in common?"

Mr. Wood was deaf, and

left Bedford on the Bird bus at 12:05 P.M.

Margaret stood on the pavement. She had Sally 15 months, in her arms.
Inside the house, her mother lay, deaf, blind and deformed in the upstairs bedroom.

- What a dark future
of conscience and trial faces Margaret.

She cannot devote
her life to her mother
because of Lionel & the children.

Mr Wood will not have Mrs Wood put in a Home while he still lives. The fact of the matter is, he will

kill himself looking after her. She requires constant attention. Then,
his good will have to go in a home.

Margaret had a cry

enormity of the task
that lay ahead of her.
There was little I

could say - except that no-one in the
family who had discussed
her problems expected

her to keep her mother
at home. (Meaning,
after Mr. Wood's death)
