Dear Mr Raddall:

Some weeks ago I asked Miss Jarvis, the Secretary of the Champlain Society, whether the Town of Liverpool had ever written for any copies of the Perkins Diary. She said she had no such request. I think the town could get two or three free copies, if the request were made; and it is highly desirable that several copies should be in the town's possession.

I suggest that you might approach the proper person and suggest that he might take the necessary action. It is, I know, none of my business, but what a dull world it would be if we were all so very conscientious! Best regards. Yours sincerely, R. MacG. Dawson with them that I thought I should pass on to you. I inquired as to the possibility of the Town of Liverpool or the Liverpool Historical Society getting a couple of copies of the book when published - it is, as you know, not purchasable in the ordinary way. I was told that if you get the Town (or Society) to write to the Champlain Society at the time of publication, it could get four or five copies free. ~~At~~ A certain

Dear Mr Roddall:

Happy New Year!

I enclose a clipping from the Winnipeg Free Press which you may or may not have seen.

You have doubtless noticed that I let off an odd bomb or two about the Perkins diary.
Ernie has, I think, written you about it, and perhaps Wallace also.
One thing I raised number of copies are set aside for those who have made the job possible, etc. and some of these would most certainly be available. Verbrun says.

The next time you come to Toronto be sure to let me know in advance, for I would like you to have lunch with Jimmie and Wallace - and myself.

Kindest regards,

Yours sincerely,

Alfred Dawson
